10,000,000 Francs Kidnaping and Murder Industry Creates Jobs This is Cheese Week

UNCLE SAM, this should interest you. France and England know and have proved that future wars will be decided in the air, and France, accordingly, offers ten million francs, almost one million dollars, as a prize "to any French airplane builder who will construct, before 1936, a flying machine burning crude oil which will break the speed record for the 10,000-kilometer closed circuit."

If the builder of the successful plane uses a motor made abroad he will get only five million, instead of ten million francs.

If the French can afford such a prize for a record-beating plane, how much could this "richest government on earth" afford, if it were really interested in flying?

The Distelhurst child, six years old, supposed to have been kidnaped and held for ransom, is found, murdered, in a shallow grave. Rags stuffed in the mouth of the child, now positively identified, indicate that the murder was caused by sudden fear of detection, perhaps by the crying of the unhappy little girl.

It is safe to assume that all the power of national as well as local government will be used to punish this crime, and free the United States from its criminal specialties, kidnaping and murder.

President Roosevelt's mind is said to be concentrated on the program to make 40,000,000 working Americans safe against the depression and the idleness that have cursed the nation for five years.

Carrying out this program, the President's chief agency will be his economic advisory council, headed by some of the ablest industrialists in the United States.

It is not necessary to remind the President that prosperity depends on jobs; jobs depend on industry; industry depends primarily on individual intelligence and initiative.

It is important not to let well-meaning theorists tell those that have created the world's greatest industries here how to run their business, or dictate to them new and better ways of running it.

This, throughout the United States, is "Cheese Week," and Americans should remember the French saying: "Cheese digests everything but itself." This means that cheese, in moderation, should be eaten every day, first, because it is one of the most delicious products of the earth, from earth to grass, from grass to cow, from cow to milk, and from milk to cheese; second, because it contributes to the farmer's prosperity; third, because it contributes to good health. To drink good wine without good cheese is to insult both.

Justice Louis D. Brandeis, oldest member of the United States Supreme Court, spent his seventy-eighth birthday, as he has spent the other days in his long life, WORKING HARD.

Justice Brandeis could have retired at any time after seventy, but prefers to stay at work. He is today, as he always has been, a wise liberal in true American sense of that word. Age has not caused his brain or his sympathies to harden.

Howard Y. Williams, organizer of the National Farmer-Labor party, tells students of Minnesota University that in 1936 "President Roosevelt will run for re-election on a liberal, third-party ticket; Governor Olson, of Minnesota, will be the candidate for 1940."

If all goes well, if that money holds out, and if presses that print our "inflation bonds" do not break down, President Roosevelt will need no third party in 1936. By that time there may not be even two par-

Girl Sues Brookline Heir for Balm

$500,000 FOR LOST LOVE IS SUIT PLEA

Refusing to become "the forgotten woman," Miss Frances M. Schirp of New York has sent a gentle reminder—notice of a $500,000 breach of promise suit—to George Hoffman Hatch, young Brookline textile magnate, who only last April startled Beacon street and Park avenue by eloping with Dorothy Angela Ruddy, New York and Boston socialite, it was learned today.

Miss Schirp, slim, brunette daughter of Dr. Francis M. Schirp, of New York, accuses the 28-year-old Brookline man of being the father of her child, Frederick Lewis Lloyd, now three years old.

Her charges consist largely of details of a clandestine romance she says was carried on before she was 21 years old. She and Hatch were close friends, she avers, at the time when her father was tried and acquitted of receiving $2000 of the money of New York's Judge Ewald.

Her father, she said, finally spent a year in prison because of his connection with the Empire Trading Company of New York, and it was during this time she said she went to a hotel with Hatch for a New Year's Eve party. They went to the hotel again within a month, the girl asserts, and a little later she learned that she was to become a mother.

When she told Hatch of this, he immediately cooled in his affection for her, she declares, and insisted that they could be married without a conference between him and her parents. He repeated his promise of marriage in the Grand Central terminal, New York, before the child was born. But on the day of its birth, he was the best man at another girl's wedding, according to Miss Schirp, and he has never seen the child she claims to be his son.

Hatch is the son of T. Edward Hatch of Powell street, Brookline, and was associated with his father in the management of the nationally-known textile firm that bears the family name. The son was in charge of the firm's New York activities.

TUCKERMAN FIGHTS NEW RACE TRIO

Prominent horse owners in this section, including Bayard Tuckerman and others, will demand a public hearing to protest against the new racing commission as appointed by Governor Ely, it was learned today.

Such a hearing would be held by the Governor's Council, which now has before it the appointments of General Charles H. Cole, as chairman, and Charles F. Connors and William H. Ensign, to control the billion dollar betting business in Massachusetts.

Those desiring the hearing, it was learned, do not wish to complain specifically about any one of the three appointees, but intend to insist on appointment of one

MISS THOMPSON ELOPES, WEDS

Miss Margaret W. Thompson, daughter of former Assistant United States Attorney William G. Thompson, was married today to Granville Ullman of New York.

The ceremony took place in the early morning hours in Harrison, N. Y., after the couple had made a vain attempt to obtain a marriage license in Greenwich, Conn.

Miss Thompson was graduated from the Winsor school in Cambridge and had been in New York the last month studying stenography.

The father of the bride refused to call the wedding an elopement, saying it was "merely the impulsive act of two young people."

18 FLEE BLAZE IN SOUTH END

Eighteen persons, including an infant in her crib, were aided to safety today when fire broke out in a restaurant at Tremont and Broadway, South End, and spread to their four-story dwelling house at 149 Broadway.

Patrolman Charles Bamberg of the Warren avenue station sounded the alarm and then joined in aiding the occupants to the street.

Joseph Frattora, 22, and Florence Frattora, 5, were treated for smoke inhalation by Dr. Joseph W. Devine, police surgeon. Their sister, Anna, 3 months, was snatched from her crib and carried out by their parents.

Antoinette Renzetti, 9, clung to a seven-toed kitten, as police and firemen led the group out.

Others aided were Theodore O'Verto, his wife, Mary, their three children, Andrew, 17, Walter, 16, and Anna, 14; Mrs. Elmerinda Renzetti, Louis, 17, Nicholas, 15, Lawrence, 14; Albiano Frattora, his wife, Vincenzina, Isaia, 11, Theresa, 9, and Camelia, 7.

UNION CHIEF PLANS PLEA TO U. S. FOR PEACE

Greater Boston was threatened with a meat shortage—especially over the week-end—today as John J. Walsh, national vice-president of the striking Meat Cutters Union, announced that he planned to ask the federal government to intervene in the market dispute.

Prices for all meats will be sharply higher, it was admitted on all sides today. The wholesale cost of "cut" sections was from 2 to 3 cents higher than yesterday, and whole beef was already up about a cent and a half a pound.

These increases will amount to at least 5 cents the pound to the housewife, it was said, with the possibility of even higher prices during the week-end shopping rush.

Meat is arriving from Chicago and other packing centers as usual, the wholesalers said today, but because there are not enough men to handle it and cut the beeves into the usual sections for the trade, there is bound to be a scarcity.

WASTE IN CUTTING

According to Samuel L. Gertman, president of the Gertman Beef Company and the "tenderloin king" of the market district, neighborhood meat dealers are beginning to buy whole carcasses. However,

Child Slavery Probe by U. S. in Lynn

Brain-fagged school children working their tired, tiny fingers for as little as 4 cents an hour!

Working at night, in dismal tenements, in unheated garages, in the unkempt back rooms of stores!

These were some of the sweat-shop—child slavery—conditions uncovered today by state investigators and passed on to federal authorities, through an alert school teacher who wondered at the drowsiness of her pupils in Lynn.

One father of four little girls already has been taken into court. At least 10 others, and a Boston handbag firm, are threatened with the same action.

The minimum wage in such an industry—the very lowest price that can be paid workers under the law—is 35 cents an hour.

THREE POOR LITTLE RICH GIRLS -:- ONE DAY IN THEIR LIVES

BARBARA HUTTON (Princess Mdivani)

A $25,000 Party for Her Birthday

Heiress 'Boils'

GUESTS UNABLE TO UNDERSTAND ENTERTAINERS

By International News Service

Paris, Nov. 15—Motoring home around dawn today, titled and untitled guests at Princess Barbara Hutton Mdivani's $250-a-head, $3750-an-hour birthday pronounced the affair everything from "swell" to "tres magnifique," but Barbara was "boiling."

That was because the entertainers, whom she had imported from London by special airplane at a cost of something like $10,000, put on their whole show in English, and many of the French guests could not understand it.

"This makes me boil," Barbara whispered to Jack Harris, one of the "Four Yacht Club Boys," an American vaudeville act brought over with London's Casino de Paris orchestra.

The little affair, for which the dining room, ballroom and a special salon of the Ritz Hotel were taken over, the ballroom converted into a Moroccan cabaret, and the London Casino de Paris closed to release the band, cost $30,000, according to private estimates.

It might have cost more, hinted Prince Alexis M'Divani, who gave the party for Barbara's 22d birthday, if it were not that times are so hard.

Dance Until 5 A. M.

The party was staged with a grandeur that equalled anything New York saw even in the golden turn of the century.

The 120 guests—who must have spent a few thousand dollars on frocks and jewels themselves—sipped cocktails shaken by the Ritz's best mixers in the special salon, then filed into the dining room while the hotel's regular customers found some place else to eat.

Entertainment and dancing until 5 a. m. in the Moroccan cabaret, arranged with tables in circled tiers, concluded the party.

Proletarian roast lamb and string beans were on the dinner menu; but so, too, were some of France's most expensive wines.

After cocktails and hors d'oeuvre, the guests were served ox-tail soup, seasoned with Madeira wine; then boiled white fish, with champagne sauce, and shad roe, with butter-and-egg sauce. The main dishes were chicken and lamb, with vegetables. Chambertin, favorite wine of Napoleon, was the drink served with the chicken. Pate de foies gras, strawberries and ice cream, then coffee and brandy ended the dinner.

Shining buckets, in which stood bottles of 1919 champagne—one of the best vintages—stood at each table in the cabaret, and the bottles were renewed as soon as emptied.

Also Farewell Party

Besides being a birthday affair, the party was a farewell for Alexis and Barbara. The Woolworth heiress sails for New York Sunday, and the prince is going to India for the Winter to play polo.

Princess Barbara received from Alexis a solid gold toilet set engraved with her initials and bearing the M'Divani crest.

She wore a close-fitting dark brown pallette gown, with her back wholly bare except for two slender shoulder-straps. Jewelry included a heavy ruby and diamond necklace, with earrings and bracelet matching.

Alexis conversed a great deal with Princess Poniatowski, formerly Frances Lawrence of America. Jacques Dupuy was present, but his wife, the former Dorothy Spreckles of San Francisco, was not. Bettina Jones, of New York, was there without her Communist parliamentarian husband, Gaston Dergery. Other Americans were Whitney Straight, the young racing motorist, and William Fiske.

The rest of the guests were European, and most of them titled.

NANCY LEITER

DOESN'T EVEN TAKE DAY OFF FROM SCHOOL

Middlebury, Ct., Nov. 15—So, she took the $1,300,000—

She took it very calmly. Just another day in the $5000 a month life of 18-year-old Nancy Leiter, granddaughter and ultimate heiress to the millions of Chicago's merchant prince, Levi Z. Leiter.

Girls at the Westover school here are trained to be perfect little ladies. Even if all the world becomes excited about a birthday that makes a millionairess, a Westover girl must not get excited. Particularly a Leiter.

NANCY LEITER

Nancy didn't. Some of the other perfect little ladies buzzed around with felicitations and probably with some small feelings of envy, but Nancy got less excited over attaining her majority and the $1,300,000 than an ordinary little girl with a new doll.

Struggling Along

She didn't even take a holiday from school. Christmas would be time enough to go home to Chicago and attend to the formalities of the transfer of funds from grandpa's trust to Nancy's bank account.

But then Nancy has been living for years at the rate of better than a thousand a week. Before the depression, her monthly income was $7500.

It was pretty hard to struggle along on a mere $5000 monthly, as Nancy remarked last year when there was an accounting of the Leiter estate.

Of course, everybody is curtailing somewhere along the line. And Grandfather Leiter's estate was $30,000,000 when he died. Mrs. Juliette Leiter, Nancy'se mother, and Thomas, her brother, shared in this huge fund.

Nancy's $1,300,000 may be a lot of money to some other little girl, but it's just another million to her.

PART STEP WON BY MOTHER IS VIEW

New York, Nov. 15—Little Gloria Vanderbilt, 10-year-old heiress to $4,000,000, today remained at the Long Island estate of her aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney, following one of the most puzzling decisions in the history of New York courts.

The little girl, who the court rules is henceforth to live "a different life than that she lived from the death of her father up to 1932," according to Justice F. Carew's cryptic statement, was satisfied.

She told the court in the course of the trial she likes it at the Whitney country estate because she has a pony and young cousins to play with there.

Gloria went to live with her aunt in 1932 after coming out of a hospital following a tonsil operation. The period referred to by Justice Carew presumably was that when she was travelling from one fashionable European resort to another with her mother.

But who had won custody of the little heiress after one of the most sensational court battles in New York society annals still remained a mystery.

Puzzling Words

The statement by Justice Carew was of no help. Nor was it intended to be. When the judge hurried from the court he was asked what the decision meant. He replied:

"It was intended to keep you from knowing or "finding out."

"Was it also designed to keep the lawyers from knowing?" he was asked.

"It was designed for what it was designed," he replied.

A conference of opposing lawyers was scheduled for today, at which time a more definite decision is expected from Justice Carew.

The justice's statement was generally taken to mean that the way is open for Mrs. Vanderbilt to regain custody of her daughter if her plans for rearing the child meet the approval of the court.

'Go Home' Sentence

Unusual disposition in the case of Thomas P. O'Hara, 29, of Chicago, was made by Judge Raoul H. Beaudreau in Middlesex Superior court when O'Hara pleaded guilty to petty thefts. He told the court he was homeless and had stolen so as to eat. His only relative is a stepfather in Chicago. Judge Beaudreau ordered the probation officer to buy the youth a bus ticket to Chicago.

CHAPTER I

The Anastasia Beauty Salons were not officially open for appointments until nine in the morning, but the operators were required to be in at eight sharp. Nor did the beauticians enter through the luxurious velvet and silken reception room, with its elegant chairs and its bowls of fresh flowers on self-conscious little tables.

There was a shabby foot-marked door behind the elevators, marked in peeling gilt letters, "Employes," that led into a long narrow room bordered on one side by white washbowls under dingy mirrors and on the other by green perforated steel lockers. At the door bristled a time clock. A few lumpy chintz and wicker chairs stood uninvitingly about.

At eight o'clock any morning the room sprang into life: girls rushed in and with more than ordinary viciousness pumped the long red hand of the time clock.

The operators then stepped briskly out of their own clothes into an Anastasia uniform, hung in a paper bag on the outside of each locker and and left there a few minutes earlier by the laundress.

The Anastasia uniform was a tailor-made white broadcloth dress (the girls paid for them but the Salon took care of the laundering). The passionate desire of every woman at the time was to look boyish and tight brassieres flattened their breasts back so harshly that the long-waisted, short-skirted dresses in vogue in 1921 made the Anastasia beauticians look like so many leggy, white-frocked little school-girls—from the neck down!

There was no loitering in the washroom because in winter the room was five degrees colder than the street and in summer it was a vapor bath. It was bitterly agreed by all that the Rileys, who owned the Anastasia chain of beauty salons, had purposely planned this fiendish discomfort to discourage lingering in the washrooms. Smoking was hysterically forbidden.

ALWAYS ON ALERT

As they dressed and changed to the white shoes and stockings that completed the outfit, there was a wealth of colorful profanity on behalf of the Rileys. They had, however, to be always on the qui vive. One never knew when a Riley would pop in on them. This uncertainty added spice and the thrill of danger to the most innocent conversation.

Twenty-five girls were now in the cramped, air-tight vault of a room, washing, changing and making up their complexions with cakes of rouge. At each door a sentry was posted to keep watch and warn off the approach of one of the Riley sisters, daughters of old Anastasia Riley, for whom the business was named. Fortunately, Miss Stella Riley, who was in charge of this, the Forty-fourth Street branch, could since her marriage several months ago be depended upon not to get in before ten.

There was a whole hour before the phone would begin its strident buzzing and the apointments to flock in. As soon as the girls were uniformed they slammed out of the washroom into the salon. All the preparations for the day had to be made in this one hour. They darted back and forth along the smooth floor, tiled like a Roman bath.

The salon was a splendid high-ceilinged room, about a hundred feet long and half as wide, on the 18th floor of the Federal Trust Building on 44th street at Fifth avenue. It had solid white marble slags for dressing tables and glittering beveled mirrors. The room was partitioned off into isles of cubicles hung with black and white rubberized silk curtains. Each cubicle was a unit of glittering efficiency.

SUPPLIES GUARDED

The manucuring tables flanked the windows and the morning sun gleamed on the shining array of scissors and files and clippers. Now the beauticians were stacking up towels and linen sheets which were counted and checked out by Dolly, the colored "linen" girl who was as heavily keyed as a warden.

The seven manicurists stacked up nests of rose-colored fluted paper dishes for the finger dipping bowls and checked in their needs. These were then okayed by Miss Norma, in charge of supplies, who also waited on the outside trade. There was yet to be an operator who could slip a cake of nail polish into her pocket for the kid sister at home or filch a tube of hair cream for her own use.

From the doorway where Miss Vera was on guard: "Sh . . . sh . . . not so loud, I just saw a dame who looked like Frozen Face. But it wasn't. Anyway, pipe down."

At the mention of their common enemy it was as if a strong wind swayed them all together. No topic of conversation was so aggressively stimulating as a discussion of the Rileys. The four Riley sisters, Anastasia Riley, the mother, and Walter Riley, the only man in the family, who owned the shops, were an endless and fertile field for gossip and abuse. And the elopement, over a month ago, of Stella Riley, who ruled this branch of the chain with a mailed fist, was still new enough to offer rich possibilities for conjecture. It was common knowledge that Jerry Leach, the husband, who was now in charge of the only Brooklyn branch of the business, had been a riding master in the Central Park Academy.

RIDES AT END

JUDGE GIVES THEM A CHOICE; 12 'GOOD MEN' SCORN FOOD

Auburn, Me., Nov. 15—At least one jury down here set a mark for others to shoot at. These jurymen would rather fight than eat. And they did.

Mr. and Mrs. John B. Rix and daughter, Elva, had a suit for $2500 against the Haskell Implement & See Company of Lewiston, that was finally given to the jurors to decide.

The jury was out more than six and a half hours, and Judge George H Worster called them in. To the foreman, he said:

"So long as you haven't reached an agreement yet, I'll give you one hour to eat."

Foreman George Dane Norton considered for a moment, then replied:

"Your Honor, we'd rather fight than eat."

So back went the jury.

Los Angeles, Nov. 15—A final decree of divorce will be given Serge Mdivani, Georgian prince, and Mary McCormic, one-time opera star, here Saturday.

The decree was expected to have been entered today but lawyers found the original judgment had not been docketed until November 17, 1933. California law requires a lapse of a year between entering of the interlocutory and final decrees.

Miss McCormic sued the prince on the ground of cruelty.

ROOSEVELT ASKS OBSERVANCE OF OLD CUSTOM

By Associated Press

Washington, Nov. 15—In a Thanksgiving Day proclamation, President Roosevelt today called upon the American people to "dedicate ourselves anew to work for the betterment of mankind."

"This should be done," he said, "with gratitude in our hearts for what has already been achieved."

The text of the proclamation follows:

"I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, hereby designate Thursday, the 29th day of November, 1934 as a day of thanksgiving for the people of the nation.

"Thus to set aside, in the autumn of each year, a day on which to give thanks to Almighty God for the blessings of life, is a wise and reverent custom, long cherished by our people. It is fitting that we should again observe this custom.

"During the past year, we have been given courage and fortitude to meet the problems which have confronted us in our national life. Our sense of social justice has deepened. We have been given vision to make new provisions for human welfare and happiness, and in a spirit of mutual happiness, we have co-operated to translate vision into reality.

"More greatly have we turned our hearts and minds to things spiritual. We can truly say, 'What profiteth it a nation if it gain the whole world and lose its own soul.'

"With gratitude in our hearts for what has already been achieved, may we, with the help of God, dedicate ourselves anew to work for the betterment of mankind.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done in the City of Washington this fifteenth day of November, in the year of Our Lord nineteen hundred and thirty-four and of the independence of the United States of America the one hundred and fifty-ninth."

THEY PART BEST FRIENDS FOR OWN GOOD IN MOVIES

Dietrich Is Out of Josef's Life

Marlene Dietrich and Josef von Sternberg have reached the parting of the ways, after seven master pictures. He has been the director in all seven of her greatest film successes. They are separating "for their own good"—but still the best of friends.

Made 7 Films

NOW AGREE TO PART THE BEST OF FRIENDS

By International News Service

Hollywood, Nov. 15—The dying glare of the brilliant Kleig lights on a movie set in the very near future will signalize the end of one of the most famed actress-director partnerships in the history of motion pictures—the partnership of Marlene Dietrich and Josef Von Sternberg.

When the last shot of the Paramount picture "Caprice Espagnole" is made and Von Sternberg calls "out," the partnership will come to an end.

Both hasten to explain that the break in the partnership, which started when Miss Dietrich left the German stage five years ago for the films, to make "The Blue Angel," is caused by no rift in friendship. The two have worked together in seven pictures.

Both say they would like to have avoided the rift in the partnership, but explain that the "principles of common sense and problems beyond the reach of friendship" dictated the break.

Built on Ideals

There have been other famous actress-director teams in the films, the most famed being those of D. W. Griffith and Lillian Gish; Edwin Carewe and Dolores Del Rio, and Cecile B. deMille and Gloria Swanson, but the partnership of Dietrich and Von Sternberg, Hollywood believes, is the most colorful of them all.

Miss Dietrich thus far has had little to say regarding the break in the partnership.

Von Sternberg declares the partnership was based on ideals which both share, but adds that he does not believe the separation will injure the work of either. He said it would benefit Miss Dietrich financially, and added:

"The danger of continuing this partnership is that we are faced with the evil of repeating scenes and locales. After all, it is difficult to make one good picture with a star—seven present a problem in ingenuity that is difficult to overcome."

RARE COIN BUYS MEAL TELLS STORY

An 1854 20-cent piece — a coin worn smooth through the years—told a story today.

Obviously long carried as a pocket piece, it was tendered in payment for a meal at the Penny Cafeteria of the Volunteers of America on Brattle street.

Poorly clad and hungry, but still too proud to become an object of charity, a tall, gaunt man handed it to the cashier, saying:

"If it is not too much trouble, I would be terribly obliged if you saved that coin for me until I can redeem it."

"Baby, Born Dec. 9, Died Dec. 12, 1897."

INSULL'S HUGE GIFTS BARED BY HIS SON

By International News Service

Chicago, Nov. 15—His father often gave bigger sums in taxes and charitythan he retained for his own use from vast earnings, Samuel Insull, r., testified today when he resumed the witness stand at the trial of Samuel Insull, fallen utilities czar.

Young Insull and his father are the chief defendants in the mail fraud case nearing an end in Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson's court. The charges were made in connection with the sale of stock in the Corporation Securities Company, an Insull concern, He testified:

"Father explained to me that the men at the head of any public business, not only utilities, have to make a disproportionate contribution to civic welfare and charity compared with what is demanded of the men in private business. Such contributions are for the good of the institutions and its relation to the public.

"In 1929, father's total salary was $481,000, but only $134,000 remained after taxes and contributions had been taken care of.

"In 1930, he made $474,413 but went into the hole $137,444 after deductions for taxes and charity were made.

"In 1931, he made $485,767, but was minus $276,225 after taking care of his charitable and tax obligations."

Young Insull testified his own salary from the six operating and investment companies of which he was an executive was $67,084 in 1929, $106,260 in 1930 and $135,000 in 1931. Subtractions for income tax and charity, he said, left the 34-year-old business leader onl $27,-237 in 1929 $23,655 in 1930 and $28,383 in 1931.

The witness drew comparisons between the earnings of the Insull companies and the salaries of the chief executives iwth Bethlehem Steel and Montgomery, Ward & Co., and their execdtives in 1925. He said:

"Earnings of the Insull companies during that year wese a little better than $90,000,000, while the combined salaries of father and I totalled $518,000. The Bethlehem Steel Company revenue for the same period was $6,000,000 and the chief executives' salaries totaled $1,635,000. Montgomery, Ward & Co.'s revenue was $15, 000,000 while the principal executives received salary of $438,700."

Her maiden name with the prefix of "Mrs." has been restored to Mrs. Charles Minot Amory by the Florida courts. Henceforth she will be "Mrs. Margaret Emerson." In her girlhood she was Margaret Emerson of Baltimore, bromo-seltzer heiress. Then she wed Dr. S. H. Mookim and later Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, who was drowned on the Lusitania. at night, after 6 o'clock, is strictly banned. And the conduct of a shop or work place in unhygienic places is a violation of the law.

All were grossly violated, it was charged, when the labor investigators followed the clues given them by the Lynn school teacher. They reported shocking conditions that may yet lead to a statewide, if not countrywide, probe into that and other industries.

In addition to reports to the state board of labor and industries the information was turned over to John J. McDonough, state NRA director, who passed it along to officials at Washington.

He disclosed that women's handbags and purses, stitched by the children as young as nine years of age, afterwards bore the NRA label that stated they were made according to code conditions.

It lifted the lid on a situation that amazed even NRA officials, hardened as they are to all the dodges employed by sweatshop whip crackers.

One parent, Louis V. Andrews of Boston street, Lynn, was charged in Lynn court with illegal employment of minor children and will go to trial on December 12, on completion of the thorough-going probe.

In Andrew's home, Inspector John Delaney testified, one nine-year-old child, two of 11, another of 12 years old were being worked on these bags.

FACTORIES IN HOMES

Director McDonough said the Boston dealer told him he had received "certificates of compliance" from the "manufacturers," the latter designation being applied to the parents who allegedly worked their children at home.

But, he said, these "manufacturers" were parents who turned bedrooms into factories and their children into the factory workers. Declaring that both of these abuses are specifically forbidden by the NRA, McDonough said:

"As a result of the State department of labor investigator dropping into a home in Lynn, it was found that young children were being worked on these bags at various times during the day and night.

"Some of these youngsters were only nine and ten years of age.

"We followed up the case and found out that the bags were being sold to a Boston firm which had issued labels (NRA insignia) to different individuals in Lynn.

"After having called to the company's attention the fact that it was quite apparent that these bags were being manufactured by children, they discontinued issuance of labels to all these manufacturers.

WARNED PREVIOUSLY

"Each and every one of these manufacturers who had been issued labels have been requested to appear at the NRA offices to explain the conditions under which these bags were manufactured."

FOSTER ARREST HALTS WEDDING

Miss Betty Feeney, 22-year-old bride-to-be of George F. Foster of Jamaica Plain, will probably have a long, long, time to wait before George leads her to the altar.

Foster, also 22, was unable to be brought from the City Hospital to be arraigned in Roxbury Court due to a bullet wound in his thigh, received after a chase through Roxbury yesterday.

He got it after Patrolmen Herbert Spencer and Thomas Noble of Mattapan station chased a stolen taxicab and Foster allegedly ran away.

Marriage license showed that he and Miss Feeney, who lives in Cable street, Jamaica Plain, were about to be wed. The ceremony was scheduled for next Wednesday, they said.

It was also discovered that Foster had been paroled from Concord Reformatory only last July after serving 17 months.

Miss Feeney explained that she and George had planned ti get married before. The Concord term forced a postponement. But she said:

Amory's Wife Is Given Divorce in Florida

By CHOLLY KNICKERBOCKER
Universal Service Society Editor

New York, Nov. 15—The long anticipated Charles Minot Amory divorce was granted in Palm Beach.

And from now on society will refer to Mrs. Amory as "Mrs. Margaret Emerson" for that is the name Mrs. Amory has decided to use.

Some months ago "Charlie" Amory and the former Mrs. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt "agreed to disagree." There were rumors of a divorce, rumors which were promptly denied until Mrs. Amory departed secretly, a few weeks back, for Palm Beach, where she has a palatial winter home, that the society gossips realized Mrs. Amory was determined to sever the ties.

Due to the fact that she has two Vanderbilt sons, Alfred and George Vanderbilt, Mrs. Amory legally had the right to resume the use of the Vanderbilt name. She declined to do this and requested the Florida court to give her legal permission to become "Mrs. Margaret Emerson," she having been born a daughter of the late Isaac Emerson of Baltimore, who amassed many millions in the manufacture of Bromo-Seltzer.

VANDERBILT WIDOW

Mrs. Amory was first married to Dr. Smith Hollins Mockim. She became the wife of Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt following a Reno divorce. Mr. Vanderbilt lost his life when the "Lusitania" was torpedoed and following Mr. Vanderbilt's death she married Raymond T. Baker, the former director of the United States mint.

After her divorce from the breezy western diplomat and politician, the very wealthy Mrs. Baker denied that she and Mr. Amory were to wed. She said:

"I'm not thinking of marriage. And besides, three marriages are enough."

WED TO BOSTONIAN

Several days later, on October 24, 1928, just 23 days after her Reno divorce, she and "Charlie" Amory, handsome, young clubman of Boston, member of one of the Hub city's oldest and most distinguished families, were married at an informal ceremony at the home of Mr. Amory's sister, Mrs. Fulton Cutting, New York city.

Many well-known society figures attended the wedding. Mrs. Baker, whose age was given on the marriage license as 44, was unattended, while Mr. Amory, who gave his age as 38, had his brother, Francis I. Amory, of Boston, as best man.

Mr. Amory is the son of the late Francis L. Amory of Boston. He was graduated from Harvard in 1912. His marriage to the beautiful Gladys M. Munn, daughter of the late Charles A. Munn of Washington, was terminated by divorce in Paris exactly 11 years later, July 17, 1923. She became the wife of Herbert Pulitzer, youngest son of the late Joseph Pulitzer, newspaper publisher.

RACE HEARING IS SOUGHT

man familiar with horses and with the conduct of racing.

ELY MEETS JUSTICE RUGG

This development in the racing situation came today while State House observers were predicting that the Ely-Curley feud over appointments is about to be sharpened by the retirement of two Supreme Court justices and the filling of their places by Governor Ely.

Chief Justice Arthur P. Rugg of the State Supreme Bench called on Governor Ely, and it was said he was asked if he and Justice William Cushing Wait—or any members—intend to retire, as often reported.

The governor would like to have such retirement come before the first of the new year, it is understood; that he and not Governor-elect Curley, would make the new appointments.

36 NAMED IN WEEK

Despite Curley's request that appointments be shelved until his "new deal" administration takes office, Governor Ely has made 36 appointments in a week, including the members of the racing commission.

The racing appointments are before the executive council whose members are checking up the appointees before confirming or rejecting them.

Connors and Ensign are entirely unfamiliar with racing, as is also General Cole, according to more than a score of prominent Massachusetts horsemen whose views were sounded today.

The commission must have one member familiar with the business, as well as with hors s in general, in order to properly conduct hearings over disputed points and possible frauds, it was stated.

PROMOTER'S HAND SEEN

Moreover, two factions in the racing business are striving for control of the lucrative business that is now about to switch from the New Hampshire and Rhode Island tracks to Massachusetts. Neophytes in the field would be helpless in the hands of the racing gentry, because of the technicalities involved, it was said.

It was learned that racing promoters, for more than six weeks, have used every influence possible to keep at least six prominent Massachusetts amateur, but thoroughly experienced horsemen from being appointed to the commission, because of the hopelessness of "fooling" them over any messy situations that arise.

Allan Wilson, associated for more than 30 years with trotting races throughout the country, and John Grew, recognized as an amateur expert on running races, expressed regret at the failure to appoint a practical horseman.

CONNORS BROKER AGENT

Connors is a customers' man at the Jackson & Curtis brokerage office and has been in that business about 15 years. Prior to that he was manager of a liquor establishment on Merrimac street. Ensign lives in Westfield where he is a neighbor of Governor Ely. He is managing director of the Ensign Box Co. there and was formerly with the Ryan Valve Co. He has held several political positions.

It was learned that one of the leading amateur society horsemen in the state was promised appointment to the commission but not by the governor. The promise was by a leading Ely follower.

One of the original petitioners for pari-mutuel legalization, who asked that his name be withheld for the present, declared:

"The governor had an opportunity to appoint a constructive, experienced race commission which in the next year must take the responsibility of gathering more than $3,000,000 in state taxes."

"No one questions the integrity of the nominated commission. It's a question of lack of knowledge and experience in the field into which they are now about to plunge."

Some of the outstanding Massachusetts horsemen are disqualified from membership because of affiliation with a proposed track at Norwood, but a number of outstanding individuals remain, he said. Among those named were Eugene McGregor, W. J. Davidson, Alvin Sortwell, Edwin Webster, Jr., Captain William Snow, C. T. Baldwin, William Chamberlain and Allan Wilson.

Inexperienced handling of the racing control may kill racing in Massachusetts before the next general election, it was asserted.

Gov. Ely is also said to be interested in seeing State Senator Joseph C. White of Jamaica Plain, a Curley foe, made head of the telephone division of the Public Utilities Department—an appointment which he cannot make but might dictate.

TO GO AHEAD ON JOBS

It was said, at the time of the Democratic pre-primary convention, that Curley expected White's assistance, but that the senator campaigned for Gen. Charles H. Cole, instead. He was one of the few "Cole men" that Curley refused to forgive, politically speaking.

If White is given this post, the Democrats will have only 19 in the Senate, to 20 Republicans, when the Legislature organizes in January. William H. O'Brien, former head of the telephone division, recently retired, having reached the age limit.

The Governor, at a Harvard Club dinner last night, frankly revealed his intention to go ahead with appointments, saying the responsibility appeared to be his because Governor-elect Curley ignored his letter suggesting a pooling of ideas.

Appointment of White to the telephone division would be by the public utilities commission, but the Governor's influence, if he cared to exert it, would count.

Armstrong immediately started for Syracuse where, he said, he would meet the district superintendent, George T. Fuggle, and "file the complete set of charges against the teacher." Fuggle, who was in the Adirondacks on a hunting trip when the "flag incident" occurred, has taken the side of the trustee.

In this country, when the nation is bothered by the cotton situation, government says to cotton growers: "Plow under every third row of cotton this year. Don't plant so much next year, and we shall pay you for cotton that you don't plant."

Russia deals less gently with her cotton difficulties. Moscow puts on trial forty-one prosperous peasants, called "Kulaks," because they have money and want to keep it. Interfering with harvesting the cotton crop is the charge against them, and they will probably be shot.

MISTREATMENT OF HAUPTMANN IS CLAIMED

By International News Service

New York, Nov. 15—A bitter quarrel concerning the treatment accorded Bruno Richard Hauptmann in his cell at Flemington, N. J., was under way today between defense attorneys and prosecutor Anthony M. Hauck, of Hunterdon County.

Retorting to Hauck's announcement that the suspect in the Lindbergh kidnaping had suicidal tendencies and had to be heavily guarded, C. Lloyd Fisher, of defense counsel, offered to submit the case to newspapermen for arbitration.

SUGGESTS PLAN

In a letter to Hauck, he said:

"My suggestion is tht we select from the newspapermen and cameramen now in Flemington a representative, that we array the three guards who are always within Hauptmann's vision in their accustomed position and put Hauptmann in his—

"That we then allow him to take a picture of the situation as it exists 24 hours a day and every day, and publish that picture in every newspaper throughout the country and let the citizens decide for themselves whether this man is being coddled or whether he is being discriminated against as no prisoner ever before confined in a jail in any country."

Fisher's ire was aroused earlier in the day by New Jersey's refusal to release a $13,150 brokerage account in the name of Mrs. Hauptmann. Attorney General Wilentz said the money would not be released until it could be shown that it was innocently acquired.

MYSTERY DENIED

A denial that there was anything "mysterious" about Harry Whitney, who has played a prominent part in the case, was issued by Mrs. Hauptmann.

She said she met him on the first day of her arrival in America in 1924 and that he also met Hauptmann before she was married. She denied he was her business manager and described him only as a "good friend who cannot be bought or bargained with."

HUEY ELATED AT DEBT BILL

By Universal Service

Baton Rouge, La., Nov. 15—Senator Huey P. Long's rubber stamp legislature functioned true to form here, the House passing his entire program of 44 bills by large majorities.

His debt moratorium bill, which he termed a part of his share-the-wealth plan, was approved unanimously, and sent, along with the other measures, to the Senate for similar action.

The "Kingfish," who sat on the speakers' dais and intently watched proceedings until the ease of his victory became monotonous, was especially jubilant over the 89 to 0 vote accorded his pet measure, the moratorium bill. He said:

"This is the first law of its kind in modern America, but the Lord helped debtors on a big scale when he provided for the wiping out of all debts every seven years."

When asked if the law meant debt cancellation, he declared:

"We're on our way. We're on our way. It's share the wealth."

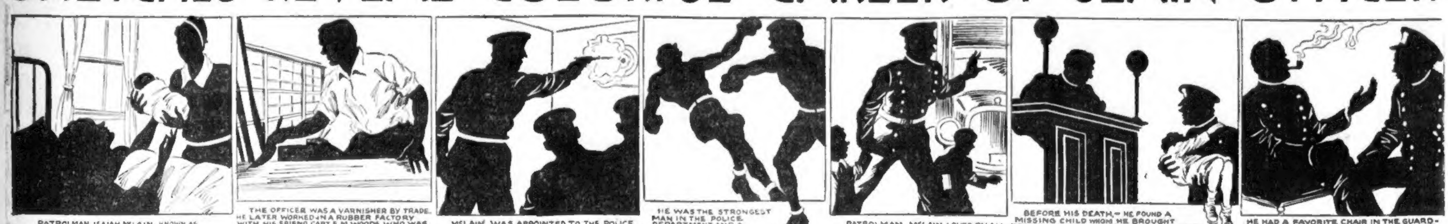
SKETCHES REVEAL COLORFUL CAREER OF SLAIN OFFICER



PATROLMAN ISAIAH McLAIN, KNOWN AS "PETE" TO ALL HIS FRIENDS, WAS BORN IN BRISTOL, MAINE, ON MAY 1, 1870.

THE OFFICER WAS A VARNISHER BY TRADE. HE LATER WORKED IN A RUBBER FACTORY WITH HIS FRIEND CAPT. E. M. WOODS, WHO WAS INSTRUMENTAL IN BRINGING ABOUT THE ARREST OF THE KILLER.

McLAIN WAS APPOINTED TO THE POLICE DEPARTMENT ON OCTOBER 1, 1895 HE WAS A FIRST CLASS OFFICER AND A MARKSMAN.

HE WAS THE STRONGEST MAN IN THE POLICE DEPARTMENT AND A SCIENTIFIC BOXER AND WRESTLER.

PATROLMAN McLAIN, LOVED BY ALL SCHOOL CHILDREN, GUARDED THEM AT STREET CROSSINGS AFTER SCHOOL.

BEFORE HIS DEATH,— HE FOUND A MISSING CHILD WHOM HE BROUGHT TO THE MALDEN POLICE STATION. HE THEN WENT BACK TO HIS ROUTE, SAYING THAT HE WOULD MAKE A REPORT WHEN HE RETURNED

HE HAD A FAVORITE CHAIR IN THE GUARD-ROOM WHERE HE WOULD SIT AND TALK TO HIS BROTHER OFFICERS AND SMOKE HIS PIPE. BUT TODAY THAT CHAIR IS EMPTY.

HIGHLIGHTS IN THE VERSATILE LIFE OF PATROLMAN ISAIAH McLAIN, SLAIN IN MALDEN, ARE PORTRAYED, STEP BY STEP, IN THESE DRAWINGS BY GEORGE COOPER, STAFF ARTIST

MALDEN MOURNS OFFICER; SLAYER DEMANDS BOOKS

While Malden paid final tribute to Patrolman Isaiah L. McLain today, Edmund J. Walsh, charged with his slaying, devoted most of his day to reading in East Cambridge jail.

The young Stoneham father of two babies, who claims his revolver snuffed out the life of Malden's oldest and best known patrolman by accident, sent for all the daily newspapers and borrowed a book from the jail library.

An entirely different scene was enacted in Malden.

Flags on the City Hall and on all public buildings were at half-staff. Black bunting draped the police station, where the slain officer had reported for duty for 38 years.

Despite the freezing weather, small knots of sympathizers stood outside the little bungalow on Echo street where the dead man had brought his second bride a year ago.

Malden's citizens, high and low, beat a path to that home to offer one last word of condolence to the sobbing widow inside.

Beside a simple casket, banked with floral tributes from fellow-officers, city officials and friends, a guard of honor stood until the final prayers from the lips of the Rev. W. Quay Roselle, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Malden.

One sergeant and eight patrolmen were despatched from each of Melrose, Medford, Everett departments and the Fellsway station of the Metropolitan police to act as a guard of honor for the last march to Wyoming Cemetery in Melrose. Forty-two of Patrolman McLain's fellow officers from Malden were attendants.

ISAIAH T. McLAIN

Captain John H. Aylward, Lieutenants Frank E. Lenehan and Charles H. Lewis were heading the Malden detail.

Active bearers, senior members of the Malden department, were Frederick J. Devanna, William T. Barrett, Abbott W. Cass, John T. Durning, Patrick J. Nolan and Albert Osterlind.

Ads 'Too Good'; Rum Stolen

By International News Service.

New York, Nov. 15—Advertising agents for a firm of Irish whiskey importers were publicly spanked by their employers today for making their newspaper ads too persuasive.

Burglars who entered a big bonded warehouse over last week-end ignored other distillery products and trucked away only cases of this particular Irish brand, because, the firm thinks, they had read its ads.

"We have, therefore, instructed our advertising agents not to be quite so convincing hereafter," read the announcement.

Fisherman, $1750 Missing in Maine

Portland, Me., Nov. 15 (AP)—Search for missing Engineer Hammond of the Boston fishing smack Trimembral, who disappeared at the same time the loss of the vessel's cash box, containing $1750, was discovered, extended today into New Hampshire and Massachusetts.

A checkup by police traced the man as far as Portsmouth, N. H., early today. A taxi driver reported he took Hammond as far as the Portsmouth bridge, where Hammond walked across to the city and engaged another taxi to drive him to Boston.

Revere police are attempting to identify the body of a man about 70, who was found lying on Bennington street, Beachmont, believed victim of a hit-and-run driver.

GIRL'S 17-STORY FALL PROBED

By International News Service

Chicago, Nov. 15—Belief that a love triangle underlay the 17-story death plunge of Miss Louise Nolan, pretty 25-year-old night club hostess, was expressed today as authorities searched for two mysterious figures in the tragedy.

Whether the girl fell or was thrown to her death from the 17th-floor room in the Medinah Club in North Michigan avenue had not been determined.

Investigators found the room in wild disorder. Overturned furniture, cigaret ends and empty bottles littered the floor. Missing were the dark-haired man and a blonde woman with whom Miss Nolan had been seen in the room by a waiter two hours earlier. Before departing the couple had closed the window from which the girl dropped and had drawn the shade.

Scratches on the window ledge, apparently made by the heel of a woman's shoe, and a rent in the window shade gave evidence of a struggle.

Guests in the club heard a violent quarrel in the room shortly after Miss Nolan's arrival. The altercation, police said, undoubtedly led to the death leap.

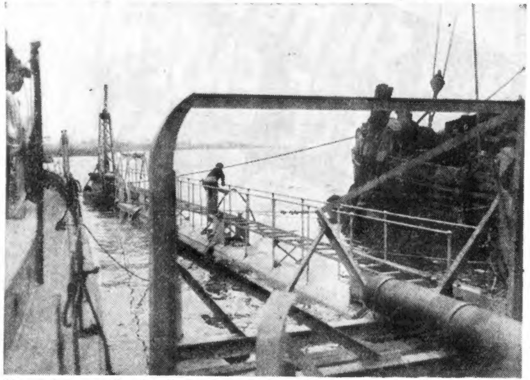
$40,000,000 Gold Hunt Ready to Start



Simon Lake's new submarine, the Laksco, is shown as she appeared in New York harbor ready to start operations for the recovery of the supposed $40,000,000 in gold from the hulk of the British ship Hussar, which sank in Hell Gate Narrows in 1780. The 22-foot submarine can crawl in any direction on a waterbed, according to the inventor. Plainly visible is the 150-foot tube which will be affixed to the underside of the submarine to be used for probing. (Picture from International News Photograph Service.)

MACEY URGES BIG U. S. NAVY

By Universal Service

San Francisco, Nov. 15—An opulent and poorly armed nation is a great temptation to a poor but well armed country.

America at all costs must maintain freedom of the seas.

These observations were made by Nelson Macey, president of the Navy League of the United States, in an address before the San Francisco Navy League and the Army and Navy Club.

Macey emphasized one point.

That was the fact that the United States navy must be built up to treay sandards, and kept as strong or stronger than any other navy in the world for protection not only to the Pacific Coast, but to this nation's commerce.

New Suspect Held in Robber Gang

Springfield, Nov. 15—The tenth to be arested in an alleged gang of burglars operating throughout western Massachusetts, Salvatore Vivenzio, 19, faced arraignment today on charges of breaking, entering and larceny.

POLICE BATTLE MILL STRIKERS, ARREST THREE

Southbridge, Nov. 15—Striking textile workers stoned the home of a loyalist and battled state and local police here today before three rioters were arrested and the mob dispersed.

Th group had marched from the gates of the Hamilton Mill, openly incensed at several hundred employes who reported for work in spite of strike order given by the girl leader of the United Textile Workers' Union here.

The stoned home was that of David Simpson, veteran employe at the mill, who has been employed during late years as a special officer. Simpson's wife and two children crouched in fear against the side of the house. Their screams of terror aroused neighbors to the aid of police in battling the mob.

Miss Jean Gauthier, girl leader of the local, visited the police station after the arrest and demanded release of the prisoners.

Police refused after a fiery speech in which she charged they had been unfair to strikers and that the men had been arrested without just cause.

The prisoners were booked as Homer Anger, 22; Harry Champigny, 30, both charged with disturbing the peace, and George Gaumond, charged with failing to move when ordered by an officer. They were held for appearanc in court tomorrow.

Manufacturers Reject Ludlow Strike Terms

Ludlow, Nov. 15—Failure of the textile manufacturers to agree to the 20 per cent raise demanded by strikers deadlocked the conference held by representatives of the local Textile Workers' Union and the Ludlow Manufacturing Associates. Pickets are still patrolling the entrances to the mills.

FIEND LINKED IN KIDNAP DEATH

By Universal Service

Nashville, Nov. 15—Six-year-old Dorothy Ann Distelhurst, whose body was found here while her father went to New York to deal with supposed kidnapers, was slain by a fiend.

This is the theory that authorities are working on as the distraught father, A. E. Distelhurst, returned from his vain vigil.

The father arrived by plane and was whisked directly to his home, where his wife has been prostrate since the little girl disappeared in September.

Authorities attributed the slaying to "a smart criminal" who knew the environs of Nashville and had picked out the spot for her burial in advance or with considerable care, after the killing.

Dorchester Youth Held in $800 Theft

Thomas Gallagher, 19, of Norfolk street, Dorchester, was arrested by Back Bay police today on a charge of stealing a truck and $800 worth of clothing in Beacon street last April.

Special Officer John Maguire, who arrested Gallagher after he had been picked up on suspicion in Watertown, said the Dorchester youth claimed that he sold the clothing to a Cambridge tailor for $25.

Gallagher's story was relayed to Cambridge police and the tailor will be held, Maguire said. Gallagher recently faced trial in Middlesex court on truck stealing charges, but the case was nol prossed because of insufficient evidence.

WATCH KIDNEYS SAME AS BOWELS

Wash Out Your 79,200 Feet of Kidney Tubes

Your bowels contain only 27 feet of intestines, yet the kidneys contain nearly 10 million tiny tubes or filters which would measure 79,200 feet if laid end to end. Therefore, it is just as important to watch the kidneys as the bowels. Kidneys are working all the time and are Nature's chief way of taking the acids and poisonous waste out of the blood.

Healthy persons pass 3 pints a day thru the bladder which contains nearly 4 pounds of waste matter. If you pass less than this amount, your 79,200 feet of kidney tubes may be clogged with poisonous waste. This is the danger signal and may be the beginning of nagging backache, leg pains, loss of pep and vitality, getting up nights, lumbago, swollen feet and ankles, rheumatic pains and dizziness.

Kidneys should be watched closely and need cleaning out the same as bowels. Ask your druggist for DOAN'S PILLS, an old prescription, which has been used successfully by millions of kidney sufferers for over 40 years. They give quick relief and will help to wash out your 79,200 feet of kidney tubes.

But don't take chances with strong drugs and so-called "kidney cures" which claim to fix you up in 15 minutes. Your common sense will tell you that this is impossible. Treatments of this nature may seriously injure and irritate delicate tissues. Insist on DOAN'S PILLS, the old reliable relief that contains no "dope" or habit-forming drugs. Be sure you get DOAN'S PILLS at your druggist. © 1934, Foster-Milburn Co.

DOWD GIVES AID TO CHRISTMAS BASKET FUND

Enclosing a check for $10, Councillor John F. Dowd, president of the City Council, today paid high praise to the work of the Boston Evening American Christmas Basket Fund and asked that all citizens do what they can to make the holiday a happy one for the less fortunate. The letter read:

The Boston American Basket Fund, Winthrop sq., Boston.

Gentlemen:

I beg to enclose my check for ten dollars to be given towards your annual Christmas Basket Fund. My only regret is not being in a better financial position to send a more substantial amount.

As president of the Boston City Council I am taking this opportunity to ask every citizen in the city to do their share towards bringing a little happiness and sunshine into the home of every poor person in Boston by subscribing a small amount to your Basket Fund.

I desire to extend to William Randolph Hearst and the Boston Evening American my sincere appreciation of the work that they have done in the past and the work that they are now doing. If every citizen in the City of Boston who reads this letter would stop for a moment and think of those unfortunates throughout our city, I am sure that they would send a small donation to your editor for the purpose of spreading happiness on Christmas Day.

Sincerely,

JOHN F. DOWD,
President, Boston City Council.

Van Loon Becomes Writer for Boston American

The Boston Evening American is glad to announce that Hendrik Willem Van Loon, author, will write regularly for its columns.

HENDRIK WILLEM VAN LOON

Mr. Van Loon possesses the rare faculty of imparting what he knows in simple, interesting language that makes reading easier than not reading.

As a sample, consider his paragraph illuminating the dreadful word "Eternity." The following quotation is from Van Loon's "Story of Mankind."

"High up in the North, in a land called Svithjod, there stands a rock which is 100 miles high and 100 miles wide. Once every 1000 years a little bird comes to this rock to sharpen its beak.

"When the rock has thus been worn away, a single day of eternity will have gone by."

Mr. Van Loon's articles will appear regularly in the Boston Evening American, starting next Monday.

HOUSE SPEAKER HINGES ON N. E. STRENGTH

By Associated Press.

Washington, Nov. 15—With elections out of the way, aspirants for the speakership of the next House are casting their eyes hungrily upon the bloc of 16 votes held by the New England Democratic delegation.

The outcome concededly will be determined by "deals" or coalitions to be formed in the next six weeks between the candidates now scrambling for support for the speakership and floor leadership.

This means the capital is listening intently for some word from Representative John W. McCormack of Boston, mentioned as a possible "dark horse" for the speakership and a strong prospect for the floor leadership.

SWEEP HELPS CHANCES

The nation-wide Democratic sweep, which gave northern Democrats 120 seats and a majority on the Democratic side, enhanced considerably the chances of McCormack's supporters to place him in the floor leadership.

Holding a majority in the Democratic caucus for the first time, the northern group is in a strategic position to press its demand that the North be given either the speakership or floor leadership.

If such an arrangement is made, the choice would be between an eastern, mid-western or western Democrat.

The speakership race now appears to lie between Byrns of Tennessee, present floor leader; Bankhead of Alabama, and Rayburn of Texas. Each, sooner or later, may be counted on to pledge his support to someone for the leadership in return for aid in his own campaign.

CONNERY TO PRESS BILL

Now that the voters have overwhelmingly endorsed the New Deal, and sent to the Congress a bigger Democratic majority than many party leaders would prefer, President Roosevelt still will have to contend with Representative Connery, Massachusetts Democrat, whose 30-hour work bill has pestered the administration through two sessions.

Out of it came the NRA and shortened work weeks in many industries, but Connery is expected to resume his efforts for enactment of a straight 30-hour restriction, and from the House labor committee of which he is chairman, may be expected many other bills likely to alarm or annoy large employers.

Public Pays for Job Insurance, Says Child

By RICHARD WASHBURN CHILD

Noted Author and Former U. S. Ambassador to Japan

Uppermost!

Partly as a recovery measure and partly as a reform measure, JOB INSURANCE has come up to the top of the Washington legislative bucket being prepared for Congress.

R. W. Child

Job insurance costs somebody money. If the government is going to undertake it, the first problem is "WHERE IS THE MONEY COMING FROM?"

Some plans have the money coming from the employed, the employers and the government—all three.

THE PUBLIC PAYS.

IT EITHER PAYS DIRECTLY IN TAXES TO SUPPORT JOB INSURANCE OR INDIRECTLY BECAUSE THE ADDED COST IS PASSED ON TO THE CONSUMER BY INDUSTRY AND COMMERCE.

We are learning that government is no MAGIC HAT. In the end the taxpayer and the consumer pay for relief. In the end they pay for such social experiments as job insurance.

MAKE NO MISTAKE ABOUT IT. HOWEVER, DO NOT THANK GOVERNMENT—THANK THE TAXPAYERS AND THE CONSUMER.

Senator Borah has just said that he believes in "job insurance" on principle.

MOST OF US DO.

BUT—

WARNS ON EXTREMES

Let us not forget that spending on anything by government will certainly ADD TO THE GOVERNMENT "GOING INTO THE RED."

ONLY THE TAXPAYER IN THE END WILL PULL THE GOVERNMENT OUT OF THE RED.

THEN REFORMS THAT COST TOO MUCH AND TOO SUDDENLY LEAVE A CIVILIZATION UNABLE TO HELP THE NEEDY.

Thereafter men are left wondering whether it would have been better not to kill off the industry that LAID THE ONLY PERMANENT JOBS.

This does not mean that job-insurance is not a beneficial measure.

It means that NO EXTREMES should be used in the hope that somehow the rich will grow poorer and the poor richer and more secure.

EXTREMES, as European experiments have discovered, may lead to the rich growing poorer, but the poor growing desperately and horribly poorer and even more helpless.

The best "job-insurance" is NORMAL AMERICAN INDUSTRY.

POINTS OUT WEAKNESS

After that comes the RIGHT KIND of job-insurance under a social reform measure.

The other SNAG in such job-insurance by taxation is this:—

WHAT ABOUT THE JOB INSURANCE PAID TO THE BUM AND LOAFER?

Are his neighbors to support the dilly-dally and the WORK EVADER?

The lack of suggestions as to how to mark the difference in job insurance between the real worker and the bum is the weakness in the job-insurance case.

So far, the "best-minds" in Washington and in books and magazines disclose that this is the weak place. European experiments in "doles" and "insurances" show that this is definitely the weak place.

EXPENSE should be watched.

AND—BUMMERY.

NAZIS SCORED BY CARDINAL

By International News ervice

Berlin, Nov. 15—After an attack on him in the newspaper "Der Blitz," Cardinal Faulhaber, Catholic prelate of Munich, today demanded of the German government whether German bishops were "defenseless against such lies," the Catholic organ "Germania" said.

His Eminence handed to the Bavarian government, the secret state police and to Dr. Wilhelm Frick, minister of the interior, copies of a public protest distributed in Munich churches.

The article against which the protest complained charged the Cardinal with "preaching a Jewish sermon, betraying the Nazi state, spreading atrocity stories, insulting old Nazi fighters, and leading in the hate song against the Nazis."

Prominent among the guest speakers will be Mrs. William Randolph Hearst, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, publisher of the Washington Herald, Miss Lena Madisen Phillips, president of the National Council of Women, Paul Bloch, publisher, Miss Helen Varrick Boswell, president, the Woman's Forum. Mrs. Edgar Cecil Melledge, president of the Theater Assembly, will preside.

Andover Driver Held as Hit-Run

Lawrence, Nov. 15—Carl Erler, 34, of Haverhill street, Andover, was arrested on manslaughter charges following the hit and run killing of Fred W. Walker, 73, of Garfield street, at Boxford street and Winthrop avenue. Walker died almost immediately after being run down by a car, allegedly driven by Erler.

The Washington SIDESHOW

By GEORGE R. BROWN

(Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service.)

Washington, Nov. 15—President Roosevelt has certainly earned another vacation, to carry him over the Thanksgiving holiday and get him in shape for the shock of a new and turbulent Congress. No subordinate under him throughout the whole new deal setup works as hard as he does. Few executives in America equal once a month what is to him an average day. The marvel is how he stands it.

The President is at his desk early, and remains late. And he usually stays right there. When you read that the President entertained somebody at lunch at the White House, nine times out of ten this is how he did it:

The clock on the mantel strikes one. A servant enters, bearing two trays. One is placed before the President at one side of his desk. The other is set down in front of the guest. The two fall to with knife and fork, and the conference goes right on between bites. The conference ends. The guest departs, the trays are taken away, the door opens, and the next visitor on the list is shown in. This continues all afternoon. Round go the hands of the old clock. Two, three, four, five—six strike. Still the President stays on the job. Darkness has come.

The monument outside his window—now crated up in steel scaffolding—is bathed in a blue mist. Still smiling, the President at last rises and goes to his bath. Just another day. With a lot of mail to be answered in the evening as he sits in the family circle.

President Roosevelt is no trencherman, as was Cleveland. Grover loved the canvasback duck, reedbirds, quail and all kinds of game, with a bottle of vintage wine on the side. The most accomplished gastronome who ever sat in the White House. President Roosevelt's lunch generally consists of soup, salad, scrambled eggs, or a bit of chicken, or a lamb chop, coffe and a dessert, for he is fond of sweets. He is on no diet.

• • •

In a typical day the President will hold a cabinet meeting, and see three or four of its members individually. Then comes the council meeting, with 30, all with reports to make, in attendance. Sandwiched in between will be, say, President Edward S. French, of the Boston & Maine, and Grenville Clark, of New York, Elihu Root's law partner, recent callers. For the conferences with leading business men still continue. Now when it comes to the strenuous life, Franklin D. could give pointers to T. R.

Chet Davis, head of "Triple A"—the brain trust doesn't refer to it as "AAA"—is trying to rustle up nearly $20,000,000.

He needs that much to save cattle of that value from dying this winter in the drouth area. For, contrary to opinion, the big dry spell is still on and Mr. Davis hasn't got the money. So far as cash for stock relief is concerned, triple A is broke. That's why Mr. Davis began buzzing Harry Hopkins as both quit the White House the other day. He hopes to get an allotment of $20,000,000 or so from Hopkins from the $525,000,000 fund for land purchase. He hasn't succeeded yet.

Some years ago some foreign admirers of Senator Borah—fur workers—sent to him a huge wall decoration of fur and leather, curiously and beautifully worked. It has been knocking around his office. The other day he took it home to ask Mrs. Borah what should be done with it. As it contains about 100 ermine tails, the betting is that Mrs. Borah will soon be exciting the envy of her feminine friends by sporting a new ermine boa.

George Franklin Dies in Concord

He was formerly law partner of Senator William Gibbs McAdoo. He is survived by his widow, son and daughter. Also surviving are three brothers, P. A. S. Franklin, president of the International Mercantile Marine Company; Walter S., vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad; and retired Admiral William S. of the New York Navay Militia.

PRESIDENT HITS DOLE; FOR JOB INSURANCE

Washington, Nov. 15—President Roosevelt outlined to the national conference on economic security here a social welfare program stripped of inflammatory features gling of insurance and relief.

He said unemployment insurance must be kept actuarilly sound and supported by contributions, not taxes. It must not be allowed to become a dole through the mingling of insurance and relief.

These views, directly contrary to the convictions expressed a few hours earlier by Relief Administrator Hopkins and Mayor LaGuardia of New York, came as a surprise to the 300 delegates.

For all these three outstanding measures in the social and economic security program, the President urged state as well as federal action. He emphasized:

"In developing each component part of the broad program for economic security, we must not lose sight of the fact that there can be no security for the individual in the midst of general insecurity. Our first task is to get the economic system to function so that there will be a greater general security.

"We cannot work miracles or solve all our problems at once. What we can do is to lay a foundation on which we can build a structure to give a greater measure of safety and hapiness to the individual than any we have ever know ."

"What I have said must not be understood as implying that we should do nothing further for the people now on relief. On the contrary, they must be our first concern. We must get them back into productive employment and as we do so we can bring them under the protection of the insurance system.

"Let us profit by the mistakes of foreign countries and keep out of unemployment insurance every element that is actuarially unsound."

Full solution of the old age pension problem also is possible "only on insurance principles," the President exlained:

"It takes so very much money to provide even a moderate pension for everybody, that when the funds are raised from taxation only, a 'means test' must necessarily be made a condition of the grant of pensions."

22 Firemen Hurt in Lime Blaze

San Francisco, Nov. 15 (AP)—A boiling sea of quick lime sent 22 firemen to the hospital today. One hundred tons of lime stored in paper sacks turned a trucking company warehouse into a virtual volcano when torrential rains overtaxed storm drains and water flooded waist deep over the lime.

Greasing their bodies and donning gas masks and hip boots, firemen fought the conflagration in short shifts for hours.

BUTLER'S

Broker, Three Others Die in Flames

New York, Nov. 15—Henry Russell Browne, 74, retired woolen commission merchant and descendant of an old New England family, his wife and two servants were burned to death today in a fire that destroyed the Browne five-story town house at 306 West 78th street.

The only survivor of the flames was a wire-haired fox terrier. A fireman found the dog by an open window in the basement.

Drowne was born in New York City Aug. 31, 1860, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Thayer Drowne. The family descended from old New England stock, its ancestors dating back to early Puritan days, when they were prominent in the founding and early history of the state of Rhode Island after arriving on the "Mayflower."

SKELETON NEAR DR. ALICE HOME

By Universal Service

Frankfort, Mich., Nov. 15—Discovery of two holes in the skull of a skeleton found some distance from the summer home near here of Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop of Chicago, caused authorities further concern as they attempted to solve the death of an unidentified person, possibly slain 10 years ago.

Pathologists and scientists at the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, were called upon for reports by P. L. Mauseth, chief of police, who shipped the bones found in a box here to the university.

Relatives of Dr. Alice Wynekoop, now in prison at Dwight, Ill., for the death of her daughter-in-law, Rheta, said it was ridiculous to consider there was any relation to their family in the finding of the bones as they hadn't lived at the Frankfort home for years.

BRITAIN WARNS JAPS ON NAVY

Copyright, 1934, by the Associated Press

London, Nov. 15—Great Britain let it be known today that if Japan rejects her proposal for naval equality "in principle," she will not grant Japan equality in the actual tonnage of their fighting craft.

This indication, from an authoritative source, was contained in a statement that Great Britain still seeks a method of approaching a compromise on the difficult question of a new naval treaty, but that she will not go beyond the recognition of equality in principle for Japan.

This decision was made independently by Great Britain some time ago and has nothing to do with any conversations her diplomats engaged in the present preliminary naval parley have had with the representatives of the United States and Japan.

2 FISHING BOATS GO ON ROCKS

Provincetown, Nov. 15—Two Gloucester fishing vessels went aground near Long Point lighthouse today to cause the greatest excitement here—with no danger—in many months.

The first was the 110-foot Bethulia, captained by Sam Nicastro of Gloucester and carrying 10 men. The plunges aroused Ted Chase, keeper of the light, whose chief complaint was that the resultant toots of the fisherman's horn scared his chickens out of their coop.

The same toots called a coast guard patrol boat from Wood End and three fishing vessels from the wharf. It was one of the latter, the Captain Drum of Gloucester that went aground while trying to pull the Bethulia free.

The rising tide finally freed both vessels.

Mystery Ailment Sweeps ERA Camp

Los Angeles, Nov. 15 (AP)—Cause of a mysterious illness which struck the Malibu mountain camp of the Federal Emergency Relief Administration was sought today by Dr. J. L. Pomeroy, county health officer.

Fifty-two men, one-fourth of the camp's force, are seriously ill, and additional physicians and nurses were rushed in to help care for the workers. Dr. Pomeroy, who said it was likely all the victims would recover, stated that the men all became ill about the same time after eating their evening meal Monday.

New Riots Feared in Frisco Strike

San Francisco, Nov. 15 (AP)—Additional police were ordered to the waterfront today to prevent violence in a renewal of the strike between longshoremen and employers.

Employers and workers alike petitioned Secretary of Labor Perkins to attempt settlement of the disputes in which each faction accuses the other of failure to abide by a recent decision of the National Longshoremen's Board.

WARREN WILLIAM IS GUEST STAR WITH RUDY VALLEE

By N. F. T.

From out beyond the Rockies, the hour of Rudy Vallee heads into Eastern ether this evening, it being known of course that the popular "mike" ceremony master is having another Hollywood fling for the film folks.

Warren William

As for tonight's 8 to 9 o'clock turn, the leading light among his guests would appear to be Warren William, the screen star. Mr. William is to be heard as the principal in a condensed dramatic version of "Clear All Wires" which play is well remembered by many for the spirited action it packed throughout.

Also aiding in the Vallee varieties, are George Stoll, a prominent West Coast orchestra overlord and violinist, Yahbut and Cheerily, two comdians who have come into their own on the Pacific slopes. In fact two funmaking teams have been slated, the other being Frank Watanabe and Honorable Archie, who do their merrymaking in Japanese dialect.

That exceptional new "Gems of Melody" network half hour that goes across the country (WBZ-WBZA) out of Boston, carries into brief bits from grand opera and the lighter operetta vein tonight between 7:15 and 7:45 p. m. Alexander Thiede directs the augmented instrumental group in renditions of the Hubay serenade, "A Un Fleur" and "Gypsy Dance" from Carmen, followed by Tschaikovsky's "Valse de Fleurs" composition.

FRENCH FAVORITE

Yvonne Gall, noted star of the Paris Opera, occupies the Paul Whiteman program spotlight (WEEI) this evening when 10 o'clock comes to pass. Whiteman has arranged a rather elaborate presentation with which to fill his allotted 60 minutes. Listeners will hear much music of the sophisticated continental character, with a liberal inclusion of melodious folk songs familiar to audiences all over the world.

Well now, the cigarettes in the dark song has a sequel, which is usually a mark of distinction as songs go. In any event, "Whispering Jack" Smith sallies forth with "I Struck a Match in the Rain" and adds "Lost in a Fog" for an encore. Meaning tonight (WNAC) at 7.30 p. m.

SNAPPY SONGSTRESS

Inviting is the prospect of Annette Hanshaw stepping up to sing the peppy "O. K. Toots" tune tonight (WNAC) with the Glen Gray Casa Loma Orchestra. Annette announces that "Must We Say Goodnight" is one more ditty she will warble.

• • •

In keeping with his practice of the last two or three weeks, Fred Waring and his Pennsylvanians devote their doings to football airs (WNAC) when their 9:30 to 10 o'clock offering comes to pass this evening.

• • •

STRIKING SYNCOPATION

Thomas "Fats" Waller, the keyboard and vocalizing jazz exponent, calls a session of his weekly "Rhythm Club" together (WNAC) tonight from 10:45 to 11 o'clock. Southern selections such as "Georgia's Gorgeous Gal" and "Jungle Fever" are at the top of the syncopators' song list.

Best Tonight

6:00 P. M.—WEEI—The Evening Tattler, under the direction of "Vic" Whitman.

9:00 P. M.—WNAC—Glen Gray's Casa Loma orchestra, Annette Hanshaw and Ted Husing; Walter O'Keefe, master of ceremonies.

11:30 P. M.—WAAB—Jack Marshard's orchestra in a half hour program of dance tunes.

METEOR SHOW ON LAST LAP

Los Angeles, Nov. 15—The universe started the final act of a five year meteor show during the night and prepared to draw the curtain for 30 years.

The show is the Leonid meteor shower, which occurs on each of three nights during a five year period. The last shower was in 1901, and the next will not be visible until 1964.

The meteors, said Professor Frederick C. Leonard, head of the astronomy department of the University of California at Los Angeles, and meteor authority, probably will be visible again after midnight on Thursday, and Friday nights.

Can Those Tech Boys Dust!

Are Technology men good housekeepers? Have they the stuff to qualify for a position with Uncle Sam in his department of household economics?

Several Tech students are busy learning how to bake pies, to sweep and dust and dry the dishes. Their efforts are due to the fact that the United States government is hunting for a household equipment collegian, to take a civil service exam and enter the government's employ as a domestic expert on ranges, cooking and the things that keep mothers busy all their lives. The pay is $3200 per year, so the Tech boys are high in their hopes to land the job.

You Hear Him on the Radio

DON PAUL

Don Paul, the Randolph Bostonian . . . Born in Boston . . . But a resident of Randolph since age 2 . . . In 22 years has grown to 6 feet . . . And 170 solid pounds . . . Wanted to be a policeman . . . A fireman . . . A trolley conductor . . . An orchestra conductor . . . The latter calling claimed him . . . So he smiles at fire-fighters and cops understandingly.

First broadcast in 1929 . . . While he was still in Boston College High . . . "Mike" fever consumed him then . . . Don and the local WAAB lines have been hooked up ever since.

He first toiled in a Randolph grocery store . . . And then spent a summer in a shoe factory . . . To earn his original set of drums . . . Which he says you can't beat, imagine.

Regrets that he wasn't born early enough to become a church-organ pumper . . . So he's gone to the other extreme . . . And is now busy with 3 one-hour shots each week over WAAB.

Don whose almost indistinguishable brother, Frank, is ace sax in the radio band, likes to play at college hops . . . and debutante parties . . . That's why he never forgets about Magnolia . . . A Dartmouth Carnival . . . And four successive M. I. T. proms.

Don descends from a long line of Erin's sons . . . And daughters . . . And possesses a fund of traditional wit . . . Don't get that mixed up with Blarney. Rides horseback frequently. Never falls off . . . So he says . . . Collects old coins as an avocation . . . Hobby to you . . . and works hard to collect new ones in his vocation . . . or job.

Don's favorite outdoor sport is tennis . . . Because . . . Two years ago . . . He said, to Dora Best, "40 Love" . . . And she replied: . . . "Yes, darling we're each 20 . . . And I think it's a good idea . . . So, they were married . . . Don, Junior, is now six months old . . . Daddy keeps the drums out of sonny-boy's reach, but claims he wouldn't mind having another Don Paul follow music as a profession.

One cent apiece per day for the next year will be contributed by members of the Medford Kiwanis Club and by such friends of club members as care to join the plan to provide funds for the Medford Boy Scouts.

Jacoby Picks Best Hand in Vanderbilt Cup Play

By Associated Press.

New York, Nov. 15—Oswald Jacoby selected today the best hand he had noted in the recent Vanderbilt cup tournament, which was won by his team, "The Four Aces and a Joker."

Bidding, he believes, accounted for his team's superiority.

DAVID BURNSTINE (NORTH)
♠—K 4 2
♡—J
♢—J 10 9 6 5 3
♣—K 10 6

WEST
♠—9 7 5
♡—10 8 6 3
♢—K 7 4
♣—J 8 3

♠—Q J 8
♡—A K Q 9 7 4
♢—A Q 8 2
♣—None

JACOBY (SOUTH)
♠—A 10 6 3
♡—5 2
♢—None.
♣—A Q 9 7 5 4 2

Vulnerable East opened with one heart. Not vulnerable, Jacoby bid three clubs, a favorite pre-emptive overcall of his, designed to hamper opponents' bidding. West passed. Having support for clubs and only a singleton heart and no defense against hearts, Burnstine raised the clubs to four. East went to four hearts and Jacoby to five clubs. Knowing of Jacoby's proneness to this type of overcall, west doubled. The contract was made without difficulty.

TURN ABOUT PLAY

The teammates of Jacoby and Burnstine played the East-West cards at another table, Howard Schenken sitting east and Michael T. Gottlieb west. An opening bid, East of one heart was overcalled South with only two clubs, which was passed around to East. Schenken bid four hearts and South called four spades. Gottlieb deduced that Schenken's bidding of four hearts unassisted warranted a raise and so he bid five hearts. North went to five spades, which East doubled. The contract was set four. The swing in favor of the Aces was 1200 points.

Five hearts could have been beaten if the ace and a low spade were led by South, followed with a diamond return from North to be trumped.

Church, State Leaders Honor Cardinal

Washington, Nov. 15—Representatives of the Catholic Church from all sections of the world and high-ranking [illegible] of the United States witnessed Catholic University pay its highest tribute to His Eminence, William Cardinal O'Connell, Archbishop of Boston and dean of the Catholic hierarchy in America.

The occasion was the Cardinal's [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] conferred upon him the degree of doctor of laws.

More than 50 bishops, three members of the United States Cabinet, diplomatic representatives from virtually every country in the world, Catholic [illegible] and clergy from all the states of the Union and the faculty and students of the university were among the 5000 who assembled to witness the ceremony.

COLORFUL PAGEANT

The gymnasium was decorated with flags of all countries, and the vestments worn by the clergy gave a distinctive color to the occasion.

Archbishop Michael J. Curley of Baltimore, chancellor of the university, delivered the convocation in which he praised the Cardinal for his brilliant career, adding:

"From the beginning of your priesthood you have used your great zeal and extraordinary energy for the growth of the church, first in the city of Medford, where you gathered the first fruits of your ministry in the Church of St. Joseph, and then in the City of Rome, itself.

"When you were rector of the North American College, here, you showed unusual solicitude and care that the candidates for the priesthood, growing in numbers and virtue, should give promise of a fruitful apostolate."

Bishop Ryan than conferred the doctor of laws degree upon the Cardinal. Amid a resounding ovation Cardinal O'Connell, in his response, expressed warm appreciation for the honor bestowed upon him.

He pointed out that it was upon the principles of the church that civilization was originally built up "back in the 'ages of faith'" adding that on them "its future prosperity and its very existence depend."

Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, representing President Roosevelt, presented the greetings of the Chief Executive and followed this by himself characterizing Cardinal O'Connell as a "great churchman, an eminent citizen and an ardent patriot."

Declaring that not only had His Eminence given a full life of service to the church, but also had served the nation, adding:

"The hospitals and other facilities in the Boston diocese were offered to the government (during the World War) and Cardinal O'Connell joined with the other leaders of the church in pledging the government the support of all Catholics."

ROOSEVELT'S GREETINGS

President Roosevelt's personal greeting to the Cardinal, read by Attorney General Cummings, was as follows:

"Your Eminence:

"I shall not be able to be present when the Catholic University of America will confer upon you, the chairman of its board of trustees, the honorary degree of doctor of laws. I regret very much that this is so, and I wish Your Eminence to be assured of my warmest congratulations and sincerest well wishes on this happy occasion.

"Honoring, as it does, the golden jubilee of your ordination to the priesthood, this academic convocation must also serve to recall the long and distinguished service you have rendered your church, and the affectionate place you have won in the hearts of your fellow citizens.

"Priest for 50 years, bishop for upwards of three decades, archbishop since 1906, and cardinal for nearly a quarter of a century, Your Eminence has paralleled this consecrated service with a real and practical interest in good citizenship and inspiring patriotism. Your 'Recollections of 70 Years of Life' are indeed full and wholesome.

"Very sincerely yours,
"FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT."

This Is Life
ROBERT E. ROGERS

I am writing this for the information of all the John Reed Clubs in the United States, those little groups of serious if amateur Communists who are trying to make literature and art conform to the rules of dialectical materialism, as they call their faith in their Marxian jargon.

Robert E. Rogers

They name their clubs after one John Reed, Harvard, 1910, who was a magazine journalist covering Villa's revolution in Mexico (the part of the American reporter in the film was drawn after Reed) and later a war correspondent in the Balkans and on the western front.

When the Russian revolution broke in 1917, his inner urge to be present where exciting things were happening graduated him from a Lincoln Steffens liberal to a romantic Communist.

He was proscribed by his own government and in 1920 died of Typhus in Moscow. His tomb is in the Kremlin. He has become to Russian revolutionary tradition a kind of legendary figure, the American poet who was the Byron of Communism. His book "Ten Days That Shook the World" is classic of its kind.

That is the legend. I have been waiting for some years to see it punctured. For I knew John Reed and I knew that he was only temporarily and romantically a Communist. Last spring, when there was talk of putting up a tablet to his memory at Harvard I wrote a column which ended on the following note.

Reed Disillusioned

"I am certain that had he lived long enough, once the excitement of revolution was over in Russia and life had settled down into a remorseless routine of regimentation, he would have been first bored, then angry, then violent. He would either have been put out of the way as a liberal and counter-revolutionary or he would have escaped to rouse the world against Communism in practice. . . . Communism was, I am certain, only a momentary halt in his great adventure. But it marked the end of his road."

I said as much only a few days ago to a young gentleman from New York, one of the editors of the New Masses, who is putting together material for a life of John Reed. As one of those who knew Reed best I gave him what I could about the young poet adventurer who has hardened into an ideological legend.

Now, to my extreme interest, and, I think, [illegible], has appeared a book entitled "I Live to Tell," written by one Jacob H. Rubin, a former Bolshevik, who was sentenced to death in Odessa and escaped by the skin of his teeth.

He writes that he saw Reed in Moscow when he was in his last illness. He quotes Reed as saying, and the style of the remarks seem to me highly characteristic of the man:

"This is the first chance I've had to speak out. My God, you don't know what it means. There is no freedom here, no justice, no opportunity, not even enough bread for the masses, and no hope. I am horribly, horribly disillusioned."

The Real Tragedy

Reed reflected that he had given up family, friends and a career for this adventure only to find things worse off than in the United States. His experience, apparently, had been exactly the same as that of Big Bill Haywood and Emma Goldman when, in seeking freedom and equality in Russia, they had found only the iron hand, the prison and the dictatorship of the proletariat to whom the anarchist, the I. W. W., and the liberal were indistinguishable from the aristocrat and the counter-revolutionary.

"I have been a Socialist all my life," said Reed, according to Rubin. "I still am, in theory. But I can see now that the world—that is, human beings—will not be ready for Socialism in a thousand years. Look at your Communist leaders and what they do when in power. Except for Lenin and Trotsky and a few others they are grafters, politicians, theorists, and hopeless fools."

That is the real tragedy of John Reed's death. I believe every word of it. It sounds like Reed. It would be the natural reaction of one who was essentially liberal, if not an anarchist, and to whom everything in the nature of tyranny and regimentation was utterly foreign and intolerable.

WOMEN Pledge AID

MATRONS RUSH TO AID FAMILY

SEEK TO HAVE THEIR CHILDREN RESTORED

Stipulating only that their identity be kept secret, a group of 25 socially prominent North Shore matrons today requested the Boston Evening American to prepare for them an approximate estimate of the cost of maintaining the unfortunate Parmalee family of Weymouth.

These ladies bountiful propose, also, to have restored to the unhappy family the three younger children taken from them by the state on Tuesday. The neglect charge affecting them is to come up Tuesday in Quincy court.

Almost within the shadow of the poor farm, Mr. and Mrs. Harrall Parmalee escapedo eviction from their Aspinwall avenue apartment in North Weymouth by taking refuge among friends in Quincy. With them is their 16-year-old daughter Constance.

Two remaining sons, William, 23, ERA workr, and Gillette, 19, had barracded themselves in the apartment, prepared to accept eviction but to resist being sent to the State Infirmary at Tewksbury.

However, following the eviction procedings this afternoon, they were permitted to go their way. Which they did—to the Quincy home where their parents are in temporary retirement.

Asserting that at one time they had a car registered, Selectman Everett E. Callahan, in charge of Weymouth welfare, said that the Parmalees had been on the welfare 95 per cent of the two years they lived in Weymouth.

Parmalee, it was said, at one time earned $3500 annually when he and his family were living in Wellesley.

And the Northern Nut Growers Association, with headquarters at Geneva, New York, is offering cash prizes to persons finding and picking the best varieties of wild nuts.

Nut trees, it seems, depend a lot on heredity. When you raise them from seeds you never know [illegible] sure what you are going to get. [illegible] nut growing experts prefer to graft [illegible] from good trees [illegible] seedlings. And it is to identify the finest parent trees that the government is bending its present effort.

Dietitians, so the official bulletins say, credit nuts with being of food value unsurpassed by other vegetable products. That apple-a-day recipe for keeping the doctor away will be more effective, they claim, if the fruit is supplemented by nuts.

Kennedy Says U. S. Aims to Aid Honest Enterprise

Speaks Before Chamber

DECLARES NEW WAR AGAINST STOCK SWINDLERS

Back in his "own country," Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Federal Securities Exchange Commission, today told the luncheon guests of the Boston Chamber of Commerce and radio listeners in what was virtually his first "official" speech that government supervision "will not destroy honest enterprise," but help it.

"There is no right or left in the processes of the Securities Exchange Commission," he said. "All we are trying to do is to go forward."

But in assuring honest business that it had nothing to fear Kennedy laid down the rules for a relentless war against stock swindlers. At the same time he defended his commission against criticisms [illegible]

[illegible] had many [illegible] Among [illegible] were former [illegible] Phil[illegible] Stock[illegible] National Bank of Boston, [illegible] Prince of the New Haven Railroad, Col. [illegible] publisher of the Boston Evening American, and Carl Dreyfus [illegible] of the Chamber of Commerce.

THANKS BOSTON

Kennedy prefaced his speech with an appreciation of Boston's hospitality and an appeal for its co-operation.

"Here in Boston, I am at home," he said. "This is 'my own country'—the place where my parents lived, where I was born and educated; where I was married and where I made my entry into business. Under the gospel of good neighborliness I felt that my discussion of the activities of the Securities Exchange Commission, over which I have the honor to preside, should be in answer to your invitation. And under that gospel I ask your help—the help that government needs from every man and woman: support unqualifiedly and whole-hearted in the goda we are trying to do; and suggestions and criticisms of how that good may be made better."

SOUNDS WARNING

"Each and every one of you is a prospective or actual member of the sucker list, and when the stranger calls you on the phone to interest you in the purchase of securities, beware.

"Unless you have confidence in the integrity o fthe sponsors, you ought to take special precautions before you sign on the dotted line, or surrender your cash, or the securities you now own. Be on your guard. The commission cannot, in the very nature of things, police every transaction in America. Where it has the evidence, rest assured, it will strike."

The speaker pointed out that in the year ending November 30, 1933, almost $2[illegible],000,000 in par value of securities were denied sale privileges in Massachusetts. In the [illegible] years of the existence of the state's securities act almost $2[illegible] of [illegible] have been [illegible]

"If business does the right thing," he said, "it will be protected and given a chance to live, make profits and grow, helping itself and helping the country. Honest business needs nothing more, the commission promises nothing less."

[illegible] Kennedy warned that this supervision "does not put the government into business as a judge of [illegible]" but simply requires that there must be a [illegible] in Washington [illegible] should guide your judgment before you can be asked to invest your money in a business."

LOSS IN MILLIONS

"Unfortunately scoundrels will capitalie the registration requirements," Kennedy added, "and may seek to sell you a security on the theory that mere filing indicates approval by the commission. Beware of such argument. The Securities Act makes such a representation a criminal offense."

Reverting again to Massachusetts statistics to point his warnings, Kennedy said:

"Your Better Business Bureau here estimates that the annual loss in this state is approximately $50,000,000. And these conditions are not peculiar to New England. I cannot be too insistent in impressing upon your minds the magnitude of the task of preventing fraudulent transactions."

In conclusion he said:

"We have been brought into being to help you as a part of the public which erects government for its service. But you can best help yourselves. You can make the investing of money honest. Then you will truly become your brother's keeper, and to do that is to acquire merit."

Burrans admitted that she had given him no money [illegible] with such strings attached. Special Justice Stuart MacLeod ordered the defendant to make restitution anyhow.

Given in Marriage

By ADELE GARRISON

CHAPTER 193

I FOLLOWED Mary's eyes at her whispered injunction of "Look!" and felt myself sharing her evident panic as I saw Avis Arlen entering the living room and apparently advancing toward us. There was no one except her mother with her as she came through the door, and I wondered wildly where Harry and Lillian Underwood could be.

They had promised me not to be a foot away from Avis until Mary and Noel were married, and had departed upon their honeymoon. What had kept them, I asked myself resentfully, then drew a quick breath of contrite relief as I saw Lillian come through the door, followed by her big husband. They came up to Mrs. Arlen ar[illegible] and put some casual query which delayed the progress of the two toward us.

"Better hurry over to your places at the buffet table," I counseled [illegible] ready to eat [illegible] Katie to [illegible] start serving [illegible] have M[illegible] place at the coffee urn wh[illegible] I keep Avis from getting near you."

MARY SEEKS AVIS

"Don't do that, M[illegible]" Then, as my eyes w[illegible] surprise, she laughed [illegible] put her hand playfully [illegible] a certain sweet possessive[illegible] upon Noel's arm.

"I've got him fast now," she said with dancing eyes, "and I fear neither angel nor devil. For the latter, read the fair maid looking over here with blood in her eye. And I'm not going to give my new pajamas [illegible] to say I didn't do [illegible] Nell. Noel, this is the first command I'm giving you. Didn't the preacher make you promise to obey? What a shame, I missed that bet! Anyway, you'll do it this time. You toddle along after me and do just what I do. T[illegible] your little Mary, Auntie Madge. Is my train [illegible]?"

She put her h[illegible] up to her cap [illegible] as I stopped and arranged her train, she whispered mischievously, "Cheerio!" When I released her, she moved swiftly toward the little group of which Avis was a center.

"Auntie Madge has just told me you are not feeling well," she said solicitously. "I am so sorry! Are you sure you [illegible] now?"

Her manner was perfection, and I saw Avis [illegible] almost mechanical social habit in which she had been reared.

"Oh, yes; perfectly all right," Avis cooed. "Thank you, [illegible] for being so concerned. I really wasn't ill; only a bit dizzy. I am only sorry that I haven't had the opportunity before now to proffer you my very best wishes for your lifelong happiness."

She extended her hand, and for a fraction of a second I feared that she meant to give Mary what anybody who knew the girl would have dubbed a "Judas kiss." But she was too versed in social nuances to commit that solecism, and when Mary [illegible] grasped her hand and released it, Avis turned to Noel and put out her hand to him.

"I do indeed congratulate you Noel," she [illegible] wide and fixed upon [illegible] "And I wish you [illegible] happiness."

NOEL PLAYS A PART

I watched Noel narrowly. He did not possess that social hypocrisy which comes so naturally to all women but to few men, and I feared that, in Dicky's slangy parlance, he would "spill the lentils" by betraying to the bystanders something of the disgust which he had evinced toward the girl the preceding evening.

But Noel reacted to her advance far better than I hoped. With just the right amount of formal courtesy for a chance acquaintance, he took her hand and bowed above it with the touch of old world grace which is his inheritance from his father. But I guessed that it was he, not Avis, who broke the handclasp.

"Thank you for both the congratulations and the good wish," he said. "And I am very glad to know you are feeling better."

"We are all glad," I put in briskly. "But I can see Katie peering anxiously through the door. That means the [illegible] ding supper is ready f[illegible] Noel, will you take Mary up to the serving table? The rest will follow your lead."

CUT THE WEDDING CAKE

Purposely I had broken through the tradition that in a "formal" wedding, the keynote of which was Mary's wedding veil, there should be a formal seated supper, with all the traditions of [illegible] dence carefully ob[illegible] had longed for a wed[illegible] and veil, and I had keyed her wedding, small as it was, to that note with this one exc[illegible] because I wished to aid Mary and Noel in their plan to get away from the hazing always planned for newly married couples, and because I was uncertain as to what Avis Arlen would d[illegible] given minute. I was [illegible] fet supper, from which anyone could slip away at any time.

Noel offered Mary his arm with alacrity and they walked toward the laden buffet table, upon which towered the wedding cake. They had hardly left me when Philip Veritzen bowed low before me, and then proffered his arm.

"May I escort you to the coffee urn?" he said. "I believe that is your destination."

But with a sudden thrill of intuition, I knew that was not all he wished to say to me.

WRITER SAYS CAREER VS. MARRIAGE LED TO UNNECESSARY TRAGEDY

Today's Woman Needs Other Interests to Help Make Marriage a Success

By Sheilah Graham

SOME GIRLS are just born naturally old-fashioned. They never quite catch up with the times. They cannot see further than the day before yesterday. And they crop up in the most unexpected places.

Merle Oberon, the British movie star, looks as modern as several days after tomorrow, but at heart she yearns for all the old melodramatic situations.

Guess why she refused to consolidate her engagement to movie mogul Joe Schenck? I will let the gal herself tell you, "Because I do not wish to give up my career," lisped the fascinating brunette on the termination of her betrothal.

THEY CAN IMAGINE

How do you get that way, Merle? Hasn't any one ever told you that in the modern manner [illegible] can [illegible] more happily than a steak with onions or beans with Boston?

"A woman with a career is a much better wife than one without," the blonde star stated [illegible] after [illegible] What is [illegible] up of [illegible] The [illegible] to be noted. She has an interest outside her home that makes her interesting inside it . . . When [illegible] wife both work they [illegible]

W[illegible] the pre-today [illegible] career bug, she at once became the old maid tragedienne in a heart-[illegible] entitled "Your Work or Your Happiness."

Female Careerist (successful, [illegible]) Ah me, how empty and unhappy my life [illegible] a career!" She [illegible]

The fashion in love as related to work has changed. Nowadays unless a gal has a career up her sleeve, the chances are no man will want to marry her.

[illegible] The lads of today are not more mercenary than those who went before them. They are less well paid, that's all.

The percentage of young men who can afford to marry and support a wife solely on their salary has dwindled to single figures.

The average young in-love couple are faced with the alternative of either postponing the marriage until the male half can earn enough for two, or to marry right away, take the honeymoon in a swift stride and both return to work afterwards.

More boy and girl marriages have taken place during the past five years than at any time during the last 50. Figure it out for yourself.

Chives Season Potato Soup

By MARTHA LEE

SOUP at the beginning of a good meal is worth all the noise that's made over it! A hot savory soup warms the very cockles on a [illegible]. A sturdy cream soup can satisfy and "stick to your ribs" and a delicate, clear soup stimulate the appetite. And none is quite so good as the homemade variety with its pleasing medley of the flavors you like best.

The requisites of a good bowl, plate or cup of soup are too obvious to need cataloging. Everybody knows soup must be hot and well-seasoned. It should also contain something of interest—some snowy flakes of rice for the spoon to "dive for," some croutons on top, or some juicy vegetables. The texture of cream soup is important—it should be neither too thick or too thin, and never, never lumpy.

What you serve with soup is also important. Try serving minced pimiento with cream [illegible] minced chives are good with potato soup, popped corn is excellent with clear soups; salted whipped cream is good with bouillon. New to serve as accompaniments are the crisp wafers known as muffin crisps.

SPINACH SOUP DE LUXE

If Junior won't eat his spinach plain, see what he does with it in a good cream soup. Our guess is that he'll eat it with relish!

½ tbsp. flour
1 cup milk
1 cup cooked spinach
½ teaspoon salt
Slice of onion

Scald milk to which slice of onion has been added. Heat a tablespoon of shortening in top of double boiler and stir in flour. Remove from heat and stir in hot milk gradually. Stir slowly over direct heat until sauce begins to boil. Season to taste and combine with cooked spinach which has been rubbed through a sieve with water in which it was cooked. Reheat.

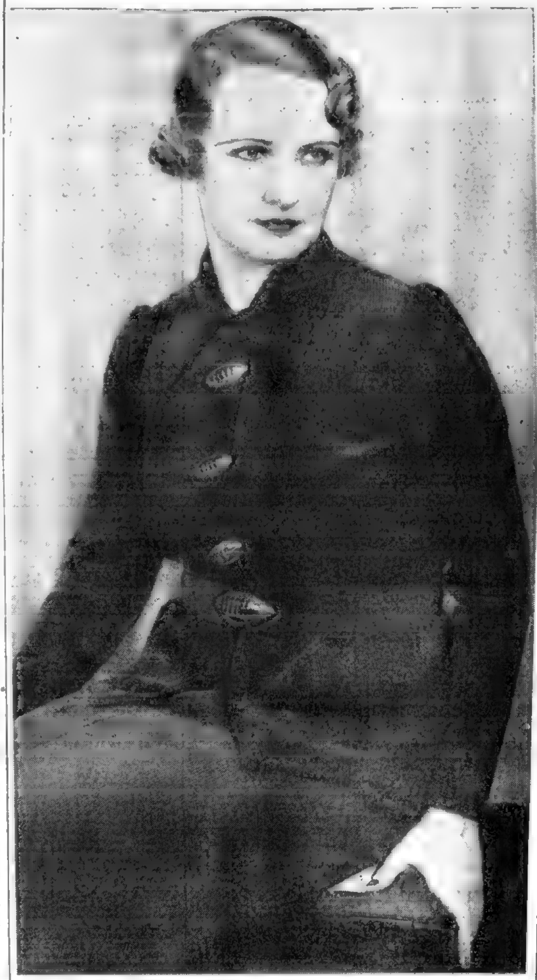
BERMUDA SOUP

It is important when pre-cooking vegetables for soup, to be sure they have no fatty taste, and retain their texture.

6 medium onions
2 cups water
1 tablespoon butter
3 tablespoons flour
2 cups milk
Salt
Cayenne pepper
1 egg yolk
1 (3¼ oz.) can pimientos

Chop onions, place in a sauce pan with two tablespoons of shortening and cover and cook over low flame until onions are straw colored. Add water and boil uncovered for 30 minutes or until onions are tender. Rub through a sieve. Melt butter, add onion puree, season. Just before serving stir in slightly beaten egg yolk, and minced pimientos.

CORDUROY AND CHROMIUM 'HIT LINE' FOR FASHION



DEEP SAPPHIRE BLUE corduroy is cut simply—a two-piece sports frock, belted jacket having an inverted pleat in back, and a straight skirt—but do look at its buttons! Huge chromium footballs, complete to lacings, close the jacket and buckle the belt. Because it takes so little room in the grip and so very little in the budget (around five dollars), it's perfect to own for the winter sports trip, for the young club woman to trot around in cool mornings, or to go packing off to college, as well as to emphasize its owner's high footfall spirits.

Mrs. Allan Weatherby of Cambridge, who models for us, is a prominent young Junior Leaguer, formerly Sylvia Cleveland of Cleveland, Ohio.

Vital Elements of Youth Are Brought to Aging, Lined Skins by Simple Process

By The Beauty Editor

THERE IS NO NEED TO PLAGUE your face with intricate massage, or turn anatomist and indulge in weird expedients and expenditures—not when wrinkles can be made to yield so assiduously to common-sense care.

Lines between the eyes and across the forehead are due so often to a starved skin and impoverished nerves and NOT to age, that there is little excuse for turning a flagging face upon the world these days.

This year's elegance in the mode is a definite challenge to beauty. Not only must the eyes be kept bright and sparkling, the teeth flashingly white, the hair glossed with health, but the face unlined and free of age-telling wrinkles.

SERENE LOVELINESS

There is no greater satisfaction than the assurance of holding one's youth. To know that the passing years leave no mark, brings confidence and serene loveliness to all. The truly lovely woman of today is not all cold reason when it comes to beauty—she chooses the best that modern science has to offer and takes her pick of old-family formulas too. She knows that some simple home treatments are unsurpassed in effectiveness.

If you have noticed lines forming on your forehead, whether due to age, worry, nerves or eye strain, begin correction work at once. Deep wrinkles of long standing are naturally almost impossible of eradication, but even they can be helped, and additional ones prevented.

OLD-TIME FORMULAS

You can't afford to be casual if you are really serious about combatting wrinkles, faithfully following treatments one night, omitting them the next. Neither can you be impatient—you can't expect miracles over-night.

I have two old-time formulas for erasing forehead wrinkles which were taken from a famous physician's private notebook. For times when the forehead has a dull, tired feeling, and your eyes smart and ache, there is an excellent home made lotion to be applied.

These recipes can be had by merely sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Beauty Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston.

Color Vogue Goes Violent

By DOROTHY ROE

COLOR CONTRASTS of 1934-'35 are as violent as they are gay.

The old ideas that navy blue must be trimmed only with red, that every gray suit must have its violet blouse and that red and pink must never be used together, have all been tossed joyously into the ash can.

PINK GLASS TRIMMING

And thus it goes—color combinations that our soberer older sisters would never have dreamed of a few years ago are now hailed with delight by the sophisticated world of fashion, and the style prism has gone quite delightfully mad.

There is a sports frock of green woolen checked with rose and worn with a jacket of beige tweed.

EGG PLANT AND BLUE

There is a navy blue jersey frock with a texture like a bath towel, its surface scattered with knots of red, ochre and white, worn with an ochre rubber rain coat.

A dress of egg plant "feather wool" has a wild plaid topcoat combining bright blue, white, egg plant and scarlet.

When Seating Table Guests

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In about two weeks I am going to give a party and I shall invite five couples. All are good friends. Is it correct for me to seat each wife and husband together, or should each man sit with another woman. F.

When we seat guests at table it is not the proper procedure to seat wife and husband next to each other.

ANNOUNCEMENT PARTY

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a girl friend to have an announcement party for her friend, or should the party be given by the girl's parents? J.

The announcement party is usually given by the parents of the girl. After this announcement party, or after the announcement, if there is to be no special party to make the announcement, it would be delightful and proper for the girl friend of the engaged girl to give a party to celebarte the announcement.

New Three-Day Liquid Diet

Question—I am five feet two inches tall and weigh 125 pounds. I wonder if there is a quick way of losing 10 pounds. My arms and hips are particularly fat. I have auburn hair and, of course, I am subject to freckles. I have heard that buttermilk mixed with corn meal would remove them. Is this true? What should I weigh?

DOT, of Medford.

Answer—As you don't state your age, it is hard to tell just how much you should weigh. If you are a girl in your 'teens your weight should be around 115 pounds. I have an excellent home treatment for freckles which will actually remove them. Buttermilk is always a good treatment and the three-day liquid diet which is safe to follow and which I advise if you are really anxious to lose 10 pounds. To obtain the freckle treatment and the threeday-liquid-diet merely send a stamped, self-addressed envelope to The Beauty Editor, Boston Evening

Puffy Eyes

Question: Although my general health is good, I am afflicted with deep circles beneath the eyes. Is there any external treatment which will help in reducing the puffiness?

BETTY P., Cambridge.

Answer: If your health is good, an external treatment may help in reducing the pouched skin. Serious eye strain often causes puffiness, and this, of course, should be treated by a physician. Be sure to get at least eight hours' sleep every night, and if you are not in the habit of using a good eye wash, do so now. I have an excellent treatment for puffy eyes which you may have by sending a stamped, self-addressed envelope to the Beauty Editor, Boston Evening American.

Befuddling Defensive Players Is One Reward of Bad Bidding

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

There are occasions when really bad bidding obtains the best possible result. Sometimes the side which has reached a bad contract is overwhelmingly favored by the Gods of Chance. On other occasions, when a hand has been bid badly, the contract is fulfilled because of bad defense. Even very fine defensive players are sometimes fooled by bad bidding. Naturally the play of a hand is predicated to a considerable extent upon the bidding which has preceded it, and if this bidding has been unnatural, the play may turn out to be the same.

On the hand below East and West, befuddled by North and South's ridiculous bidding, cooperated with the declarer to such an extent that he was able to fulfill a contract which might have gone down two or more tricks.

North, Dealer.
East and West vulnerable.

North: ♠ Q J 9, ♡ 7 5 4 3, ◇ Q 9, ♣ K 8 5 2
West: ♠ 8 5 3, ♡ A J, ◇ A J 8 3, ♣ Q 10 9 4
East: ♠ A 10 6 4 2, ♡ K 10, ◇ 10 7 5 4, ♣ 6 3
South: ♠ K 7, ♡ Q 9 8 6 2, ◇ K 6 2, ♣ A J 7

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
Pass	Pass	1 ♣ (1)	Pass
2 ♣	Pass	2 N T (2)	Pass
3 N T	Pass	Pass	Double (3)
Pass	Pass	Pass

(1) South was a player who over a period of years had acquired a reputation for psychics. I can account for this bid only on the theory that South felt compelled to sustain his reputation.

(2) Why South still chose to conceal his heart suit will forever remain a mystery. It is possible that he naively hoped the opponents might step in and bid that suit.

(3) West was deeply suspicious of the bidding and backed his suspicions by doubling.

The West player selected as his opening lead his spade eight, the top of a worthless three-card suit. Had his partner played properly this opening would have obtained for East and West the maximum penalty.

However, it was not to be. East surveyed the dummy and finally decided that West's double must have been based on a strong heart holding in back of the declarer and stoppers in the minor suits. East, of course, did not know whether West held two or three spades, and finally decided there would be no prospect of setting up the spade suit unless West's top hearts were strong enough to insure East an eventual re-entry with the heart King. However, if this were the case, East reasoned, the heart suit itself probably offered better prospects than the spade suit.

Going by this inference, East went up with his spade Ace on the opening lead, and returned the heart King. The declarer false-carded with the eight-spot, and now it was West's turn to go into a huddle. It did seem too much to hope that East should turn up with a heart suit topped by the King-Queen—but what else could the shift to the heart King indicate? West made what he considered a very natural and normal unblocking play, overtaking the heart King with the Ace and returning the Jack.

I need not go any further with the story. Suffice it to say that East and West are both looking for new partners.

Mary Fuller's Party Is Huge Success

MARY FULLER'S PRESENTATION tea was a perfect crush, as we expected. No one ever refuses an invitation to this beautiful house and hospitality.

The pretty brunette debutante was lovely in a white and gold gown with corsage of green and brown orchids . . . Mrs. Alvan T. Fuller received with her daughter in a charming gown of olive green velvet and wore white orchids . . . Miss Lydia, who made her debut two years ago, was chic in dark red velvet.

Throngs of people kept surging up and down the broad staircase from the golden ballroom and handsome living rooms to the beautiful dining room where the table was laid in royal fashion with a feast for the season's queens. There were little frosted cakes with the initials "M. F." in honor of the budding daughter.

Anne Sortwell Wears Wine Red Gown

MARY MORISON, one of the head pourers, chose a white and silver thread tunic and black skirt for her afternoon costume . . . Anne Sortwell was in the rich wine red . . . Frances Shea selected the autumn green and brown combination . . . Elizabeth Everts also wore brown to enhance her lovely brunette coloring . . . it was a cold day and the debutantes rushed in with rosy cheeks and shining eyes for tea and hot hors d'oeuvres.

Pretty Grace Nelson offset her blonde tresses and blue eyes with a blue gown, and Molly Bowditch, whose debut took place later last evening at the Junior League, wore a stunning black dress with silver yoke . . . Ellen Bottomley's frock was of rose lame and Jane Bancroft came in the Kelly green with Russian turban, very becoming.

Miss Rebekah Hobbs was the head pourer and shone brightly in lipstick red with black velvet Tyrolean . . . Mary Hastings wore midnight blue with metal cloth yoke and Evelyn Hassman was in the flattering black velvet. Lucie Hopkins wore the fashionable black and silver and Barbara Holdsworth appeared in the same combination of colors . . . Alice Vose Burrage's gown was of black velvet.

Mrs. James Nelson attractive in the autumn green . . . Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Higgins enjoying the party, Mrs. Higgins very grand in blue velvet . . . Mrs. Adolph Leeds in black velvet and large white hat . . . Mrs. Channing Wells svelte in black . . .

Kathleen Keville

Kathleen Keville was likewise seen in scarlet and Frances McElwain was among those present in dark green . . . of course, this is only a few of the debutantes of the season who were paying their respects to Miss Fuller; it was one of the largest teas of the early season. A ball will be given later for Miss Mary.

We hear that Dudley Wolfe was married in Geneva, Switzerland, recently. This very rich young man took unto himself a Mrs. Pennington for wife, the daughter of Walter Damrosch of musical fame, we believe. She was president of the New York Junior League during her early social season in that city a few years ago. They will have skiing and sports in common as they are both ardent winter sports lovers.

MERCURY DOWN TO 21 TODAY

Greater Boston shivered in the coldest night of the season, with a mercury as low as 21 at 2 a. m. in this city and with a reading of 15 in outside communities. But there was temporary relief ahead.

Officially the weather man said that today would be fair and somewhat milder. Moderate northwesterly winds, shifting to the west or southwest, should replace the biting blasts of the nighttime. The temperature at 6 a. m. was 24 above.

But the surcease was only expected to be temporary and tomorrow, according to the weather maps, the temperature will plunge downward again, probably exceeding any mark set so far.

Woburn, Beverly and parts of Middlesex County had the honors for being the cold spots in the state today with the mercury at 17 above. In other parts of New England, however, where snow fell heavily on Tuesday, winter held a stiff grip.

The coldest spot as usual was Mt. Washington in New Hampshire where the mercury reached zero at 8 a. m. Eight inches of snow also blanketed the slopes.

And I had to be scolded into trying it:

MIDOL

"A friend who knew how I suffered every month kept scolding me until I had to try Midol. How glad I am that she did! Two tablets see me through my worst day comfortably. I tell every girl I discover who is still suffering the way I used to."

Many users of these remarkable tablets have given them endorsement as strong as that! Many are grateful enough to spread the word at every opportunity. For Midol does bring definite relief, and prompt relief from periodic pain even to those who have always suffered severely. You can go through this trying time without those severe pains if you use Midol.

Midol is as harmless as the aspirin you take for an ordinary headache. Don't be afraid of the speed with which Midol takes hold; it is not a narcotic. All drug-stores have these tablets; just ask for Midol—today, so you'll be ready.

'Gambling' on Screen's New Bills

The new pictures opening at Boston theaters tomorrow bring Anna Sten to the screen at Loew's State in "We Live Again," a Samuel Goldwyn production which co-stars Fredric March. The story is based on the dramatic novel "Resurrection," by Tolstoy, and in the supporting cast are Jane Baxter, one of England's leading screen actresses, C. Aubrey Smith and Jessie Ralph. Rouben Mamoulian handled the direction and the adaptation for films has been made from a script by Preston Sturges, Leonard Praskins and Maxwell Anderson.

At the Metropolitan the screen attraction is "The Pursuit of Happiness," comedy of the days of the American Revolution, with Francis Lederer and Joan Bennett in the leading roles. The story is based on the quaint old Colonial custom of bundling, and brings Francis Lederer, one of New York's leading stage stars, to his first important screen role. Charlie Ruggles and Mary Boland are featured in the cast, which also includes Barbara Barondess, Minor Watson, Adrian Morris and Walter Kingsford.

Geo. M. Cohan

On the stage at the Met is "Anatole's Affairs of 1935," produced by Anatole Friedland, and one of Broadway's most pretentious musical offerings. Harry Rose, the "Broadway Jester," Harry and Frank Seamon from the "Laugh Parade," Jean Bowden, Stetson, Francis Black, Edwin Michaels, Peggy Alexander and Dorothy Shanahan are the stars. Fabien Sevitzky and the Grand Orchestra offer another musical treat arranged from the compositions of old masters.

* * *

At the Keith Memorial tomorrow, with a preview tonight at 10 o'clock, "Great Expectations," one of the famous masterpieces of Charles Dickens, takes over the screen. Henry Hull, Phillips Holmes, Florence Reed and Jane Wyatt have the leading roles in this production of one of the most famous classics of English literature.

America's first actor, George M. Cohan, stars at the Keith-Boston in one of his most popular stage successes, "Gambling." The mystery melodrama has Dorothy Burgess and Wynne Gibson in the leading feminine roles, with Walter Gilbert, popular Boston actor, Percy Ames and Ted Newton in the supporting cast.

Ranny Weeks heads another gala vaudeville bill at the Boston, which has as headliners the Jans and Lynton Revue, Pat Henning, George Dormonde and Brother, Clyde Hager, Cordova Sisters, Tom Harty and Virginia Gibson.

* * *

Tuesday Symphony

The second concert of the Tuesday afternoon series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra, which this season is devoted to Schubert, Schumann and Brahms, will take place next Tuesday, November 20 at three o'clock in Symphony Hall. Dr. Serge Koussevitzky will then present the Fifth Symphony of Schubert, and two movements from Schumann's Second Symphony in C major. Brahm's Fourth Symphony in E minor will complete the program.

By Associated Press

Vienna, Nov. 15—The Austrian government announced today that unless a formal demand is made by American authorities for the extradition of Captain Ivan Poderjay by Dec. 1, it will be obliged to release him.

The American legation here is powerless to do anything in the case until a formal warrant for Poderjay's arrest on a charge of bigamy in connection with the disappearance of his bride, Agnes Tuverson, New York and Detroit lawyer, arrives from Washington.

Ballet Russe Presents "The Fantastic Toyshop"

By HARRIS MORGAN

The world famous Monte Carlo Ballet Russe continues to crowd the Boston Opera House with enthusiastic audiences. At yesterday's matinee, the first of three, one of the most beautiful of the entire repertoire, "Les Sylphides," with music by Chopin and scenery by Alexander Benois, was the chief attraction.

Mlle Tamara Toumanova, one of the leading ballerina of the group; Irina Baronova, Tatiana Riabouchinska, and others of the talented members of the ballet appeared in the colorful and charming dance that has the loveliest of the Chopin music as its background.

The "Children's Tales," with music by Anatole Liadoff, and choreography by Leonide Massine, was another of the numbers at the matinee with Yurek Shabelevsky and Tatiana Chamie as principals. The ever popular "Beautiful Blue Danube" concluded the afternoon's program.

At last evening's performance, "The Fantastic Toyshop," which has proved the most popular of the new ballets included in the Monte Carlo offering, was repeated, and once more met with warm response from a large audience.

"Aurora's Wedding," with a score by Tchaikovsky, and the thrilling "Prince Igor," with music by Borodine," completed last night's program.

* * *

This evening "Les Sylphides," "Destiny," with music derived from Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony, and the American ballet, "Union Pacific," with a libretto by Archibald MacLeish and music by Nicholas Nobakoff, will comprise the program. "Union Pacific" is based on American folk songs of the period of 1860.

A NEW STAR BECOMES A GREAT STAR

Just as a story-teller tells best the story of himself, an actress plays best the drama that is herself. And close to Anna Sten's heart lies the story of "Resurrection" . . . Tolstoy's cry for mercy to those who suffer . . . With a great role, she fulfills the rich promise of a great actress!

Lights and Shadows

By George Holland

One of the most [illegible] disasters of the [illegible], the Morro Castle fire off the Jersey coast, was the reason for the wholesale revision of the book of "Anything Goes." The original book of "Anything Goes," which is playing the second of [illegible] weeks at the Colonial theater, was written by P. G. Wodehouse and Guy Bolton. But these two authors were in England and obligated to remain there when the [illegible] coastwise steamer was consumed by flames a few months ago.

• • •

Vinton Freedley, the young Harvard graduate who presents "Anything Goes," felt that his musical comedy must be entirely re-written for public viewing after the Morro Castle disaster, because the theme of the story dealt with a lunatic at large on an ocean liner and the probable sinking of the ship. One of the big scenes was the "Sinners" scene led by Victor Moore and Ethel Merman. This scene is still in but it now becomes a hilarious attempt on the part of Mr. Moore as a pseudo-preacher, to save the soul of William Gaxton, a pseudo Public Enemy No. 1. But essentially, based on the Cole Porter song, still in, the scene was preceded by an entirely different set of musical comedy events.

• • •

If "Anything Goes" were less than one of the really marvelous musical comedies of the decade, these items would not have the interest they presently assume. I cannot imagine the original book of "Anything Goes" being a work so funny that Victor Moore as "Moon-faced Mooney" would have been credited as being better than "Alexander Throttlebottom" of "Of Thee I Sing." In Broadway feed-box circles, however, Mr. Moore is being spoken of this week prior to the show's opening next week at the Alvin Theater in tones that are hushed. He will be the [illegible] of the Big City within a fortnight, his heralds are sure, and Miss Merman will [illegible] new stature as one of the personalities of the stage.

• • •

Two former newspapermen and one of them a press agent at present, rewrote and re-staged the book of "Anything Goes." Howard Lindsay is the first and Russel Crouse the other. Mr. Crouse is even now out of Boston, press-agenting "Valley Forge," a new show produced by his employers, the Theater Guild. Mr. Lindsay remains in town. The finale of "Anything Goes" has been changed and Donald Oenslager has substituted a set of midnight blue curtains for his original pale blue effects in the finale scene.

• • •

For me they could have left "Anything Goes" as it was produced here its first night. A bit of cutting, a term of playing, and "Anything Goes" still would have towered so far above all its predecessors of the past few years that other producers would have had something to shoot at without being dismayed. Lord knows what will happen to producing enterprise if Mr. Freedley and his co-workers, chiefly Mr. Lindsay, improve "Anything Goes" too much. Maybe, at that, it will do away with the possibility of future "America Sings."

Pessimist, I am!

Gayety Program

On the screen at the Gayety for the remainder of the week is "Grand Canary," with Warner Baxter and Madge Evans in the central roles. Marjorie Rambeau, Zita Johann and H. B. Warner are featured in the cast. The companion picture is "Housewife," with Bette Davis, George Brent and Ann Dvorak. Five acts of vaudeville complete the new program.

TOM MIX PICKS WESTERN SERIAL FOR FILM COMEBACK

Boys' Hero Brings His Circus Along to Start Work on "The Texas Ranger"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Motion Picture Editor Universal Service

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, Nov. 15. Tom Mix is coming back into the movies to play the lead in a fifteen episode serial to be made by Mascot Pictures. Nat Levine, who believes thoroughly that the old western has never been duplicated as entertainment for the small boys of the country, flew to Texas where Tom owns a three-ring circus. He signed Tom to play the hero in "The Texas Ranger."

What to do with the circus was a problem. So Tom decided to bring his whole show to [illegible] Hoot Gibson's old stamping ground, while he is making the movies. Not a bad idea for Hollywood to [illegible].

The Marlene Dietrich-Paramount contract is all verbally agreed upon and all that remains now is the actual signing. Ernst Lubitsch will direct Miss Dietrich in her next picture after she finishes "Caprice Espagnole" with Josef Von Sternberg. Lubitsch is now preparing a special story and it's not "Carmen" and it's not Gene Fowler's story "The Wild Mare," according to Emanuel Cohen, who should know. Mr. Cohen is back in harness as production head of Paramount, working day and night on program schedules, and if you don't think he is popular with the stars all you have to do is ask any one of them for an opinion of his ability.

Twenty-four hours in Hollywood was all Constance Collier needed to get herself all set and ready for her first movie. She started work with David O. Selznick in "Vanessa," Hugh Walpole's story, greeted by Helen Hayes, Robert Montgomery and Otto Kruger, the other principals in the cast. Miss Collier was given a cordial welcome. Her pet Pekingese, Miss Elizabeth Brown, who played in the London cast of "Dinner at Eight" with her mistress, may do a picture later for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Betcha never heard of Charles Bogle, our newest screen writer. On the other hand betcha did hear of him but under his own moniker of hold everything—W. C. Fields. Seems Bill always had an idea that "The Man on the Flying Trapeze" would make a swell story for a comedy. So he up and wrote the thing off under the pen name of Charles Bogle and it's to star him with Burns and Allen. Norman McLeod is directing.

Steffi Duna, who was tested originally for the lead in "East River," is now set to replace Grace Bradley who was given the role which Steffi didn't get. Robert Kane, who expects to make the retakes within the next 10 days, says that most of Raoul Walsh's scenes without Miss Duna will be used and that James Tinling, put on for the direction of some of the additional scenes, will not conflict with the work Mr. Walsh has already done for Fox.

LOUIS B. MAYER, entertaining SAMUEL GOLDWYN at luncheon, thereby ending a long reported misunderstanding; DORIS DUKE off for the East via plane, RICARDO CORTEZ on the same plane, rushing to New York for a radio appearance; the IRVING BERLINS in Palm Springs after which they will return East without IRVING doing any of his grand music for the movies; CLAUDETTE COLBERT returning to work after being laid low with a very bad attack of flu; RUDY VALLEE disguised with dark glasses lunching with blonde ALICE FAYE, these two are speaking again and apparently happy and in love; MADGE EVANS and TOM GALLERY, with the love light in their eyes, tete-a-teteing at a cafe; MRS. TOD BROWNING hostess at a surprise birthday luncheon for MRS. ROBERT LEONARD; GINGER ROGERS' marriage to LEW AYRES followed by a reception at the Ambassador, one of Hollywood's most interesting events. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

'Man of Aran' for Fine Arts

"Man of Aran," the Robert Flaherty production which was awarded the Mussolini cup as the finest European film of the year, will be shown at the Fine Arts theater at an early date.

The director, who made "Nanook of the North," went to the Aran Islands off the western coast of Ireland to make this film, which has been acclaimed as one of the most remarkable classics of the screen. Tiger King, Maggie Dirrane and Michael Dillane, the three leading characters of the story, attended the premiere of the picture in New York and were recent visitors in Boston.

The western crowd has been sending in a few orders in the farm stocks and other favorites.

They were stepping along yesterday, particularly the machinery motors. A factor was the growing belief that the Russian debt impasse was near a solution, and this has been nursed by a number of stories to this effect recently apparently inspired.

Bond Market Is Mixed in Dull Trading

By Associated Press

New York, Nov. 15—Irregular but narrow changes marked bond [illegible] today as business moved at [illegible]

U S Treasury issues were the firmest spot in the list showing gains up to [illegible] of a point. The [illegible] fourth 4¼s declined ⅛, while Treasury guaranteed issues were practically motionless.

The corporate list had an uneven tone. Rails [illegible] uncertainly. Among those to gain were Santa Fe 4s, Great Northern 4½s, New York Central 5s and Southern Railway 4s while minor losses were registered by Nickel Plate 4½s, Chesapeake & Ohio 4½s and St Paul 5s.

Industrials and utilities likewise were spotty. International Telephone 5s, American Telephone 5s, Detroit Edison 4½s, Phillips Petroleum 5¼s and National Dairy [illegible] eased, while Postal Telegraph 5s, Texas Corp. 5s, North American 5s and Consolidated Gas 5½s worked a little higher.

Grains Lower in Chicago Trading

Chicago, Nov. 15 (AP)—Disappointing action of foreign markets led to downturns today in wheat prices here. At least temporarily Chicago buyers appeared reluctant to take hold, despite bullish domestic conditions.

Opening ⅛-⅞ off, May 98⅞-⅞, Chicago wheat afterward held near the initial limits. Corn started unchanged to ⅛ down, May 82¾-83 and subsequently sagged all around.

BUSINESS MEN MORE CERTAIN OF FUTURE

By B. C. FORBES

B. C. Forbes

I[illegible] the best tonic I have experienced in many a moon.

It comes from the general sales manager, H. C. Jamerson of a new air conditioning enterprise recently organized under heavyweight sponsorship. Returning to New York after four months' solid travel, he tells me:

"I have interviewed approximately 350 business men in all the principal cities as far West as Kansas City and Fort Worth, Tex. In each I talked to from six to 60 individuals, in man[illegible] lines of business, who had written to us with reference to the distribution of our product—bankers, investment brokers, insurance men, newspaper publishers, florists, oil men, department store executives, cotton brokers, manufacturers of clothing, jewelers, distributors of sound equipment for theaters, distributors of radio, refrigerators and oil burners, heating and ventilating contractors, lumber and coal dealers, automobile distributors, wholesale drygoods executives, house furnishers, furniture dealers.

"In practically all cases they have been successful in the past. Ages, 30 to 65.

"Although I discussed with them the entrance into an absolutely new business that requires a substantial investment, and which means at least two years of pioneering with very little chance of showing a profit on that investment until the second or third year, I have found only one man, an ex-banker, who was fearful of the future and felt that conditions were such that the time is not ripe to enter a new business.

"There seems to be no fear on the part of any of these men that economic conditions in the country would prevent their being successful. They all seem to feel that their success would depend only on their own ability to grasp the business and to get together an efficient organization.

* * *

"Apparently there is plenty of capital available. Apparently capable business men are not under the impression that the country is 'headed for the dogs,' and apparently eagerness to pioneer a new industry is just as much with our present generation as it ever was in the past.

"Obviously, the majority of business men are looking forward with confidence and without that fear of the future which was prevalent a few years ago."

SHARES HIGHER NEAR CLOSE OF MARKET

New York, Nov. 15. Encouraged by the President's address last night the stock market forged ahead [illegible] today to reach new high levels on the movement.

Trading picked up substantially on the further upturn and turnover exceeded a million shares by a substantial margin.

Mail order and farm shares were among the [illegible] under the leadership of J. I. Case and Montgomery Ward which [illegible] to more than 2 points.

TELEPHONE WEAK

Steel and other industrial shares were another group to work higher under the leadership of the old time favorites, including United States Steel, Bethlehem and American Can.

Selling in the utilities showed signs of drying up and fractional gains were scored in a few instances such as Consolidated Gas. American Telephone, however, was weak on the announced investigation of the company's affairs by the Federal Communications Commission.

While gains in the motor [illegible] the trend was [illegible] higher levels. Auto equipments, though, continued in demand with Briggs Manufacturing reaching a new high for the year.

Proposal to create a billion dollar fund for rail equipment brought some demand for stock in the group, particularly for Budd Manufacturing which rose substantially.

Oils, chemicals and liquors moved in unison with the market.

UTILITIES HOLD

The utilities generally held to a narrow range despite the recent rate attacks and a new blast by the Federal Trade Commission charging that a "propaganda" campaign had been engineered by the power companies.

Even the veteran American Telephone did not give a great deal of ground in the face of announcement that the communications commission had ordered an investigation of the corporation and its relations with the associated Bell companies.

While the inflationists were not able to find much cheer in the President's speech before the [illegible] conference [illegible] Wall Street conservative elements expressed much satisfaction over the executive's intimations that some proposed reforms may be postponed until after recovery is further advanced.

In most financial quarters the president's words were interpreted as evidence that the government and the business community [illegible] "getting together" [illegible] Mr. Roosevelt [illegible] organizations promoting fantastic [illegible] have aroused hopes which cannot possibly be fulfilled."

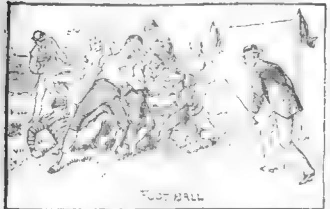
Great Moments in the History of [illegible] Sports



Interest has [illegible] Sports that we cannot, will not refrain from [illegible] backward glance into the glamorous past. [illegible] exciting moment in the memorable game between [illegible] and the Fairbury, Illinois Young Men's [illegible] & Recreation Club played on Thanksgiving Day [illegible] zero with only 56 minutes to play. The Pleasant Hour Boys threw away their nose protectors and shin guards, determined to resist rather than let the Pontiacs have it all their own way.

The above picture tells the story. Big, lovable Clem Studebaker (called "Tiny" by one and all) is pushing with all his might for the Pontiacs. The players are in a hopeless tangle, biting, gnawing, pinching and, we're sorry to say, sometimes indulging in language that might have brought blushes to the "fair sex" had there been any ladies in attendance. No one thought to provide a whistle.

It looked like a nasty situation when, suddenly, Raleigh Harris, local mortician and [illegible] deputy sheriff, stepped on the field and arrested all members of [illegible] unlawful assembly, rioting and parking bicycles too close to a fire plug. Fairbury and Pontiac have never played since, but old timers still remember 1901 as the coldest winter ever experienced in Livingston County.

That ought to be easy to fix. Show the boys splitting 60-40.

NEW YORK—Trouble with Miss Grant Cook is that she is "man crazy," according to Miss Madeline Slade, foremost feminine disciple of Mahatma Gandhi. "When the gossip about her reached the ears of Gandhi," she said, "he attempted to prevail upon her to change her way of life."

Bucky Harris Promises To Revive Old Fighting Style and Gets a Job ↕ Former Football 'Worst' Meets One Time 'Best' For Wrestling Title

By AUSTEN LAKE

BUCKY HARRIS, THE MARCELLED baseball manager who graduated in the long, long ago from a slate picker's job in a Pennsylvania colliery, has been summoned back to Washington.

This is a matter of some mystery to me. Because Mr. Clark Griffith, to whom a penny earned is a penny saved, derived some pleasant profits from Bucky's term of management in 1924 and '25, but pulled the plug and let him slip down the drain when the Washington club jolted apart, as happens to the best of clubs.

Austen Lake

It would seem logical that, when Griffith sent him away, Bucky was no longer a competent manager. But now, after 10 years of odd jobs in Detroit and Washington, he is a good manager again.

* * *

THERE IS ONLY ONE EXPLANATION for this. Bucky, after his initial successes, learned to wear a dinner jacket, married the daughter of a United States senator from West Virginia, and picked up the conversational drawl of the smart country club set.

From being a tough type who would go under the stands to swap fist-punches with players who needed to be fought with, he took up shaving every day and gentling down his voice to soft, drawing room tones.

No longer would he stamp and yell and windmill his arms at umpires or on the coaching lines. And he retired as a player while in the full blush of his powers.

I am telling you that Griffith, who can see as far around a corner as anybody, expected to pick up Harris on the rebound when he sold Cronin to the Red Sox for $150,000—which is more than any living ball player, except Babe Ruth in his prime, is worth.

But he intentionally dallied and delayed, keeping Bucky on the anxious seat, to fan his smouldering ashes into a new flame.

In going back to Washington, Harris has been warned to discard his dinner jacket manner and resume his old, spiritual dungarees, to storm around and be sassy again. Which I hear he has agreed to do.

Under Bucky's marcelled skull lies a complete index of baseball knowledge, and as an imitation of his old 1924-25 self, I would not be surprised to see him come back to work another miracle and make the Red Sox very remorseful that they let him go.

FRED OSTERGREN, THE SANTA CLAUS-STYLE football coach of Arlington high, once tutored the gridiron team at St. Bonaventure's College at Olean, N. Y. Among his pupils was a stocky, stumble-footed lad with a Tarzan body and the features of a Greek god.

At a little later stage, a stringy, swivel-hipped, goat-fetted youth was earning All-America honors for Colgate, being the country's leading scorer and counted the world's hardest running fullback of his day. That was Len Macaluso.

Only, miracle-working time has buttered George over with a talent that will make him flatten the old Colgate hero and prove that the first in football shall be least on the torture mat.

THE KICK-UP OF PUBLICITY dust that Senator Huey Long of Louisiana is raising over his State University football team proves that the Senator is a statesman of varied interests, not the least of which is a national championship team.

The Senator has reversed the usual college boy process. At an age when college lads learn to play and chant their Mother Goose doggerel cheers, Long was busy seizing the handles of state politics, learning the arts of triple-cross and winning arguments, elections and contests of all kinds, by hook or otherwise.

Now, in his adult stage, he finds time to play college boy and make up the deficiencies of his lost youth, turning cartwheels with pretty girl cheer leaders, goosestepping with the college band and making student hearts happy with a combination of burlesque goofiness and executive coattail yanking that makes him a grown-up version of Alice in Wonderland, Huey in Blunderland, forsooth.

Oddly, Captain "Biff" Jones of the U. S. Artillery and head coach at West Point in the golden day of Chris Cagle, is now head of football at Louisiana, having military chores on the side.

A bluff, forthright type, with a square chin and a love of fair play, he has no authority but to coach and make fit the players whom Senator Long certifies as eligible.

"Biff" has no problems of scouting up husky material and combing the fields for bully boys to fill his ranks. The Senator-college boy political czar attends to that.

ANOTHER DAVIS CUP PLAYER has deserted a life of gentle tennis hummery to join Tilden's professional circus and turn square with himself.

Rollo Stoefen has signed for 12½ per cent of the gross receipts from the next tennis tour, pay that is honestly stipulated and removes him from the class of amateur moochers who sing for their supper and play for cuff-money handed over by amateur tournament promoters by the dark of the moon.

Stoefen did very well for himself, in company with the male and female tennis cards who have, for years, been as professional as Max Baer, without some of Max's respectability.

But having a troublesome streak of honesty Rollo has rebelled against the dubious social scheme and commercial status which he was forced to accept while retaining his amateur card and has decided to accept the sordid shilling as a token of his new deal and the shedding of the false skin of amateurism.

After a lapse of three seasons, Bruin Cubs are back at the Boston Arena, their old stamping grounds, where they will make their first appearance [illegible] against the Philadelphia Arrows.

Due to the fact that they started their season on the road, Cubs have [illegible] three starts. They were set back twice by the [illegible] in Quebec and then went through a hectic 70-minute battle with the Reds in Providence.

Manager Lionel Hitchman is confident that his Cubs will break through to victory tonight.

Although some of the newcomers [illegible] before measuring up to the Can-Am standard, [illegible] on the whole is satisfied with the outlook.

Seven of the players who fought the Cubs' battles a year ago have held their positions against the bidding of the many new players tried out in the Quebec training camp. They are Joe Jerwa, Bob Davie and Bert McInenly, defense players, and Frank Jerwa, Don Smillie, Bill Cunningham and Obs Heximer, forwards.

Hitchman has a brand new forward line to throw against the Arrows tonight. Alec Motter, a smart young center ice player who played for the Bruins in their games against Toronto and Detroit, will be the center, while Phil Besler and Jack Shill will be the wings.

Shill, who played with Toronto Leafs a year ago, probably will wind up with the Bruins. He is a fast, good shooting left winger who lacks only major league experience.

WISCONSIN HONORS O'DEA SATURDAY

By Universal Service

San Francisco, Nov. 15—Pat O'Dea, Wisconsin University's football immortal, who was "tired of being a football hero," is going back home Saturday.

The long lost star of the Badgers, believed killed in the World War, will be the honored guest at the homecoming celebration.

O'Dea, now identified as the original Pat whose kicks thrilled fans of another era, recently was discovered as Charlie Mitchell, an obscure lumberman of Westwood, Calif. He has been absent from the campus for 30 years, during which time his name and deeds lived on.

Pat was given up as dead, though memories were repeatedly revived by rumors that he had been found.

And now Pat O'Dea is returning to Madison, Wisconsin—and to belated honors that will be heaped upon him.

BOB ALLEN — WILBUR STORER — BRONY KASTANTIN

The two giant tackles and the mite quarterback of Pat Hanley's Terriers talk over strategy for the game with Boston College at Alumni Field on Saturday. The two tackles are each exactly six feet, four inches tall, while Storer is almost a foot shorter. But Storer, a Waltham boy, is a whale of a quarterback and an elusive field runner and may help the Terriers spring an upset by clipping the wings of Joe Mckenney's Eagles. What Hypocrisies Are Committed in Thy Name, O Football!

Cavanaugh [illegible] charges have not [illegible] but Coach [illegible] that [illegible] Gilmore has a faculty of coming up with a winner when least expected.

Joe McKenney is putting his Eagles through daily passing drills for "Pat" Hanley's Terriers. The B. C.-B. U. game will be a wide open affair, well worth attending. . . . As soon as he gets straightened away after his encounter with Chick Meehan's Jaspers, Harry Stuhldreher will tackle another old pal who is also gunning for revenge, "Pop" Warner.

Just as soon as it was [illegible] to [illegible] play Pitt or [illegible] for [illegible] Tigertown [illegible] the Big Three agreement against post season games. [illegible] the Princeton [illegible] the [illegible] or by-laws of the Big Three [illegible] gates to 11 points for the purpose [illegible] machine? Nobody has ever been able to explain how [illegible] standing prep [illegible] lated at [illegible] before [illegible] contract was [illegible].

A few years ago Colgate alumni, it is said, agreed to deliver 25 football players to Coach Andy Kerr annually. Up to a certain point that plan made a hit with the canny Scot. But, as a Scot, Andy felt it would be to his advantage to pass on the incoming freshmen who were to receive football scholarships.

In this corner of [illegible] football adherents are of [illegible] opinion that everything is [illegible] the up and up in the Big Ten. A year ago [illegible] Big Ten [illegible] who had spent a year at that university [illegible] played a year at a midwest college, who [illegible] at the end of his freshman year [illegible] had acquired a [illegible] of two [illegible].

If you are at a loss to understand why they draw twice as many fans to games on the Pacific Coast as they do here, harken to this. The reserve seats for the Stanford-Washington game were listed at $1.75 and end zone ducats sold for $.75 . . . And, they are doing you a favor here when they allow you to parkyakakas in the end seats for $1.65.

137-POUND BOY TO PILOT B. U.

"Not a chance. They have too much manpower and weight for us. In adition, Sam Lourie and Dick Van Inderstine, two of my best linemen, are on the shelf."

The team that takes the field against Boston College Saturday, [illegible] doubt. If Hanley [illegible] can, start a team which will [illegible] Captain George Abdeely as the only senior.

The chances are, however, [illegible] there will be three [illegible] starting [illegible]. Captain George Abdeely and Charles [illegible] will be [illegible] guard [illegible] Wilbur Storer, midget 137-pound [illegible] will be [illegible] quarterback.

LOTT-STOEFEN CASE 'GOOD FOR GAME'

By Universal Service

New York, Nov. 15—Far from being disconcerted by the turn of events which has seen, first, George Lott and then his doubles partner Lester Stoefen embrace professionalism, Holcombe Ward, chairman of the Davis Cup committee, feels "it will be a good thing for the game in the long run."

"Of course, the loss of men like Stoefen and Lott is not to be underestimated," he added. "Nevertheless, it will not mean the loss of the point they won in the challenge round dougles.

"We've been winning that point for a good many years, and we can do it again with Wilmer Allison and John Van Ryn, the old champions.

"We also have a most promising junior team in Donald Budge and Gene Mako.

"In a way, the falling away of veterans will be a good thing for the game. It will give young men like Budge and Mako and Frankie Parker a chance.

"I consider both Budge and Parker excellent singles material but, usually, we're too prone to rely upon the known quantity that veteran players represent."

JUDGE FUCHS, M'KECHNIE TALK TRADE WITH BUCS

[illegible] that Babe Ruth will start next season as manager of the Braves [illegible] McKechnie, pilot for [illegible] goes [illegible] to [illegible].

[illegible] home, was [illegible] conferences [illegible] week [illegible] He'll accompany [illegible] to the [illegible] meeting at Louisville later this month and then to the [illegible] in New York.

BASEBALL LAW COMPLICATED

There is [illegible] at the Braves could use an official of McKechnie's experience and connections should Ruth be named pilot, even though Judge Fuchs has been quoted as saying that he has never considered Wilbur? [illegible] for a front office berth.

The Babe knows little of the National League or its players. He [illegible] as the average [illegible] Judge Fuchs acts again as attorney [illegible] to the club. Business Manager Fred Mitchell is occupied coaching the Harvard varsity until June.

Everything has run without a hitch because McKechnie is as able an executive as manager, but with Ruth in command on the field, a practical baseball man on the job 24 hours of every day would be required.

Few fans realize that baseball law is plenty complicated and ignorance of [illegible] expensive at times.

Fuchs would not drop a hint as to what changes are planned in the Tribe's roster except to insist that Wally Berger and Ed Brandt will not be traded.

DEAL WITH BUCCS ON

It's going to be extremely difficult to hook any [illegible] material without [illegible] the home run king or [illegible] but McKechnie [illegible] performed several miracles [illegible] past and may have a few more [illegible] his sleeve.

The phone conversations of last week may mean that Boss Bill is dickering with the Pirates on the swap that was [illegible] wind during the world series.

This would send Freddie Lindstrom, Earl Grace and Hal Smith of the Buccs to the Wigwam and while a pitcher and [illegible] fielder would be demanded in return, neither Brandt nor Berger would be involved.

By Jack Conway

PAUL BOWSER [illegible] not permit Len Macaluso to start on an immediate European tour in the event [illegible] Don George's [illegible] weight wrestling [illegible] at the Garden [illegible]

"I have signed Macaluso for three title defense matches in Boston," said Bowser today. "Under my contract, I can name Macaluso's opponents, and [illegible] the dates for the contests.

Mr. Boston

"As champion, Macaluso would prove a tremendous attraction here. It is only fair to New England fans and to myself that Macaluso go through with his Boston bouts before he invades Europe. If he wrestled abroad, he might be defeated by a foreign grappler over whom I would have no control.

"I do not intend to give Macaluso a title opportunity, and then not have his services."

MACALUSO [illegible] signed a contract [illegible] giving the latter [illegible] services for three bouts [illegible] George.

"I shall delay my European tour until next Spring," said Len. "I think I can beat any men named by Bowser. I understand that if I conquer George the plan calls for me to clash with Jim Browning, Gus Sonnenberg and Jim Londos. I believe I can upset any member of this trio."

RAND AND AIETA GREEN'S HOPES AT CORNELL

Hanover N. H., Nov. 15—With injuries claiming the former ranking halfbacks, Dartmouth will pin its hopes on a pair of former Greater Boston [illegible] Saturday when [illegible] Cornell eleven at Ithaca N. Y.

Norman Rand, [illegible] Massachusetts sensation at Salem high school, and fiery Jimmy Aieta, hard-running Dorchester lad, now ascend to ranking positions after three years of obscurity. Bench warmers as sophomores and juniors, they show promise of developing into fine backfield threats in the concluding weeks of their senior year.

Rand is pronounced the most improved backfield man on the squad and shows a recovery of all the elusiveness and speed that made him a great at Salem. His running in both Yale and New Hampshire games stood out, and this week in scrimmage he again displayed his natural aptitude for picking holes and reversing his field to advantage.

KIERNAN IMPROVING

Aieta may be forced to perform an "iron man" act at Cornell. With Bill Clark's gridiron career over due to a bad shoulder injury, and with Eddie Chamberlain out with a bad hip, only Aieta remains among the experienced left halfback candidates. Perhaps Captain Jack Hill, injured all year, may be pressed into service, but it is extremely doubtful.

One consolation to the coaches is the rapid development of J. Kiernan, sophomore fullback replacement, who now looms as a capable alternate for Johnny Handrahan, chunky sophomore from Hull, Mass., who has been doing nearly full-time service in all major games.

Kiernan sprinted for 55 yards and a touchdown against New Hampshire last Saturday, and in scrimmage this week has shown great speed and hard running. He is not up to Handrahan on defense, however.

DECKERT RETURNS

The line problem occasioned by the loss of Acting Captain He[illegible] Stearns and Sophomore Don O[illegible] regular left guard and right tackle, is being solved by the transfer of Vic Kiarsis to right tackle and the advancement of Chuck Billings to ranking left guard. Both men, especially Kiarsis, are rising to the occasion.

The return of Harry Deckert, veteran pilot, who was injured in the Yale game, bolsters this post, although Jack Kenney has been doing a good job in his absence.

CLARK, BEATTIE LEAD PRO LOOP

By Associated Press

New York, Nov. 15—Earl (Dutch) Clark of Detroit, in total points, and Beattie Feathers of the Chicago Bears, in ground gained, are the National Professional Football League's current leaders in offense.

Feathers piled up 915 yards in 88 attempts, has averaged better than 10 yards every time he has been given the ball. His nearest rival is Swede Hanson of Philadelphia, who has averaged 6½ yards.

Clark, former All-America quarterback from Colorado College, has scored 72 points on eight touchdowns, 12 points after touchdown and four field goals. Following him is the Bears' great kicking star, Jack Manders of Minnesota, whose 58 points have been gained through three touchdowns, 25 points after touchdown and five field goals. Feathers is third with 18 points.

Harry Newman of the Giants has completed 32 passes, high in that respect, although Clark, with 20 completed in 41 attempted, has a better average.

Tufts Left End Has Leg Ailment

By Dennis Gildea

Everett High Head Coach
As told to Bill Connell

System is the keynote in preparing for any opponent of major importance. There is a definite routine to go through if a team is to play its best game. Naturally a team of schoolboys may play "over its head" or below par at any time, but if the current routine of preparation has been followed, it is probable that the team will be in the form expected.

A most vital point to consider is lecturing on games in which the opponent was scouted. In the latter part of the season, when the foe has been scouted in all its games, it takes considerable time to cover in lectures the information gleaned.

In the first place we have pictures taken during our own games of the year. Each boy sees these photos, hears them discussed in lecture and blackboard drill, and gets a chance to note previous errors and plan to avoid such misplays in the future.

EVENING LECTURES

This week, for example, we study from our files pictures taken during our games with Malden during the past few years. The study, plus discussion of scouts' reports, planning defense and attack for the coming game, necessitates long preparation.

Last week we had two evening blackboard talks regarding the Malden game. Monday morning came another lecture. Monday afternoon the boys were free, and Monday evening lecture resumed the tuning up. Yesterday we worked on defense against the coming opponent, today we have light work with kicking drill for the backs and signal drill slated, and if we practice at all tomorrow it will be to run through plays and check offensive and defensive assignments.

Scrimmage at this stage of the season is almost entirely eliminated.

You may note that a large part of the work regards study of the prospective foe's possibilities. All this is necessary because it would do little good to have a strong offense, but be unable to stop the other team.

COACH GETS KEYED UP

I have found that a great majority of the successful coaches become very much keyed up from a day or two before the game until after the event. The feeling is similar to that experienced by the player himself.

I do not believe that any coach who fails to become aroused before a game will ever have much success. The leading coach, like the leading player, almost always reaches the state of keen excitement induced by approaching competition.

Considering all the detail of preparation for big games and the emotional toll the contest itself exacts, is it any wonder that coaches acquire gray hair and wrinkled eyebrows before they've been in the profession many seasons?

By Warren McGuirk

Malden High Head Coach,
As Told to Bill Connell.

The day before the game the pressure tells, and the coach begins to feel as he did when a player, with tension increasing, appetite falling off and ability to relax gradually disappearing.

But where the player begins to lose this feeling as soon as the game starts, the coach must sit on the bench and suffer. He can't even move about much, and not until the game ends is there a let down. Then the reaction is fully as sharp as when fatigue claims the worn-out player.

TUNING OF OFFENSE VITAL

Actual preparations for the game starts a week ahead with the smoothing of offense taking considerable time. We are through with team scrimmaging after the first month of the season, and confine contact work to dummy scrimmage, working the line and backs separately, and later on together.

A 15-minute blackboard drill each day to conclude the practice period covers defense for the coming opponent's plays. The defense used by the foe in previous games of the year is considered carefully. Changes are made in one's own offense to take advantage of possible weaknesses in the opponent's defense.

Mistakes of previous games are discussed early in the week, and the quarterback is instructed to watch for certain plays which may reasonably be expected from given opponents.

SCOUTING ESSENTIAL

Naturally much of this work depends on careful scouting. The amount of scouting depends on the ability of the foe, and to prepare for a strong team a mass of scouts' information must be sifted down.

Since each week brings a hard game, Monday work must be cancelled or made light. This throws the burden of effort on Tuesday to Friday afternoons, inclusive. Since time at hand is always limited, a balanced workout each day with a brief period spent on each angle of the game is necessary.

All this should give a fan a general idea of the amount of work required prior to a big game, such as the Everett game of this week. The vast amount of work means that practice hours must be carefully budgeted and the schedule followed rigorously.

Add to these items the emotional grind and you'll not envy the coach his duties. In spite of which I, and other coaches I know, would rather be coaching football these fall afternoons than anything else.

WATSON TAKES TACKLE BERTH FROM ADLIS

One of the big surprises of the Harvard season is due to be sprung tomorrow when Eddie Casey announces his starting lineup for the New Hampshire game.

Watson's performance against Army, after replacing Mike Adlis at right tackle, not only won the approval of Adam Walsh, Crimson line coach, but in such a degree that Walsh undoubtedly will name him to start against New Hampshire on Saturday.

Adlis, the 17-year-old Lynn youngster, who is probably the youngest major eleven regular in the country, has been a mainstay of the Crimson line since the opening game.

Watson, a fighter to the finish, weighs 192, 10 pounds lighter than Adlis, stands 6.2 and packs a tremendous punch.

That punch is just what has been lacking in the Harvard offense. The Crimson line, though improving defensively week by week, has failed to develop offensive charge enough to set a back loose beyond the line of scrimmage.

In order to re-establish the power of his offense, Casey and Walsh have been casting favoring eyes at Watson's aggressiveness.

HUSKY CAPTAIN IS SHIFTED

Should the change be made, Mert Rice, Chelsea athlete, who has been Mitchell's understudy all season, will move into the right wing spot.

Lion Cub Chases West Coast Pro 100 Yards Down Fairway

By Universal Service

Los Angeles, Nov. 15—Arthur Clarkson, Riviera professional, was chased 100 yards down the first fairway by a 6-months-old lion cub and all the other professionals were led home by a public links amateur in the Westwood Hills $1000 open.

Scoring a 67, five under par, Don Erickson, Sunset Fields star, led Ray Mangrum, professional, by a single stroke in the first 18 holes of play.

Fay Coleman, Willie Goggin, Jack Fraser and Bruce Phillips completed the 70 bracelet, and the 71's were George Von Elm, Lew Scott, Frank Nixon, Fred Morrison and Howard Smith. Nixon was second low amateur.

Clarkson's brother professionals framed it with Cliff Clark, trainer of the Gilmore lion cub, to have the cub chase the Riviera pro off the first tee.

Clarkson was off his mark like a Wykoff when he saw the cub coming in his direction. Down the first fairway he ran, with the cub in fast pursuit.

The other professionals laughed so hard that they were unable to keep pace with the amateur Erickson.

DAVE WILSON PICKS LITTLE LIE AS BEST BET AT BOWIE

Glory That Was Harvard's

By Dave Egan

Once upon a time, a famous character called "John the Orangeman" went from dormitory to dormitory in the Harvard Yard, selling his oranges and candies to the students.

John the Orangeman is a Harvard immortal, like little Mike Denihan and Blind Dan, who sells the papers in Harvard Square—humble men who were respected and even loved because of their summery philosophy.

John the Orangeman, too, will be remembered long after we have returned to dust, because of his translation of Harvard's Latin motto, Veritas.

"Veritas," he said soberly, "means 'to hell with Yale'."

Since the jolly old Colonel, in these columns, tried to explain the cause of Harvard's football collapse, letters have poured in from old grads as well as young ones.

A graduate of the class of '14, when they had some fair-to-middlin' teams across the Charles, turns to poetry.

His nom de plume is Veritas, which is to be translated, he insists, according to the version of John the Orangeman. So . . .

THE OLD GRAD'S DREAM

By VERITAS

Oh, the grad stared as the shadows
'Cross the battle field did fleet,
As the sun set on another,
On yet one more defeat.

Then old Memory rose and smote him
With the things that it held fast,
With the heroes and the glories
Of a long, departed past.

Of a line, whose boast was "Half-backs
Who can break us do not live!"
He could see Ben Dibblee charging
And that line—Man! Did it give!

Ah! the days when Logan called them
In the kingly Haughton reign,
When a quarter never called on Any Crimson back in vain.

When a punt from mighty Felton
Sixty far-flung yards was worth,
And a Hardwick jarred their teeth loose
As he nailed them to the earth.

When the Trumbulls and the Pennocks
Tore in raging like one man,
As they crashed the Yale line goalwards
For a peerless Ned Mahan.

To the gods, who shield all good teams
'Gainst the gods, who seek their fall,
Did the grad send up a prayer
Into which he flung his all.

"Give me Wendells, who can crack through
Stonewall lines which foes create,
Give me kickers like one Brickley,
Who can kick the grin off Fate.

"Give me quarters like C. Daley,
Who can run back any kick,
A Mahan again to wraith it
Through the worst field Luck can pick.

Just another man like Bur~,
Give me one more end like Hardwick
And then—Harvard, as you were!"

As you wuz, Mister Veritas. The Haughtons et al went out of circulation with mustache cups, Buster Brown collars, and that joke about the traveling salesman who met the farmer's estimable daughter.

But what a dream, my fran!

Dempsey Referees Gordon Battle

Ted Germaine, Jose Firpo, Bull Currie and Cannonball Grange will tangle in a battle royal and Jack Dempsey, the one-time Manassa Mauler, will officiate in the main bout of Charlie Gordon's mat card at Mechanics Building next Tuesday night.

Dempsey's last appearance here in the capacity of a referee was election night at Mechanics. So many fans were disappointed in not being able to attend that Gordon made arrangements with Tiger Jack for a return visit.

CORRYMEELA IN SHAPE TO WIN SIXTH RACE

FIRST RACE

GRAND PRINCE, LADY HOCKBERGER, ANNA V. L.

GRAND PRINCE and Jockey Don Meade may form the winning combination of this affair. According to the clockers, the aged son of Baby Grand was never in better fettle. LADY HOCKBERGER, a consistent performer on Canadian tracks the past summer, figures next best on dope. Anna V. L. has been working over this strip for the last 10 days and must be accorded a good chance.

SECOND RACE

MARWEE, SUN WAY, GOOSE CREEK

MARWEE stands out like a sore thumb, if past performances may be taken as a true criterion. SUN WAY displayed high speed in several of his previous outings and should hold on long enough to save the place from GOOSE CREEK.

THIRD RACE

TRIANGULAR, BUSHMAN, STONE MARTIN

TRIANGULAR had Infinitate driving to stave off his stretch challenge last Monday at Pimlico. Off that race, he figures to stand a world of beating in this affair. BUSHMAN shipped in from Narragansett, is as sharp as a tack. STONE MARTIN figures next best.

FOURTH RACE

LITTLE LIE, CANTERBOY, TWOADAY

LITTLE LIE will have CANTERBOY to drub. The latter is much better than his last effort at Narragansett would suggest.. TWOADAY is a highly regarded juvenile in the E. R. Bracley barn.

FIFTH RACE

LITTLE DINAH, LAST TIME, MEMORABLE

LITTLE DINAH is entitled to a three-star call in an event of this sort. The opposition is about the same as she has drubbed in the past. LAST TIME, a brisk morning worker, would be dangerous if she would run back to her good Western form. MEMORABLE displayed high speed in several of his recent races.

SIXTH RACE

CORRYMEELA, FAIRLY WILD, BLACK FALCON

Under the light impost of 109 pounds, Corrymeela may take the top and never be headed in this affair. The Ral Parr colorbearer has speed to burn and is right at tops. FAIRLY WILD was a dead short thoroughbred last out and should show marked improvement. BLACK FALCON will be racing over t strip that he likes.

SEVENTH RACE

POTION, KOZAK, REPEAL

POTION, a slow beginner, is being favored by an outside post position and should escape early interference. Just a question of him running back to that last winning race. KOZAK nosed out Just Fun in a swifly run race at Pimlico yesterday. REPEAL looks as good as anything else for the minor award.

TODAY'S RACE SCRATCHES

AT BOWIE

GrangeQuitsProGame; to Coach Next Year

By Walter Kiley

It's the end of the gridiron trail for Harold "Red" Grange, "The Galloping Ghost," who as a sophomore at Illinois in 1923 burst like a streak of fire across the skies of the athletic world.

College hero, darling of the fans with his name on ten million lips, central figure in a professional football war, as the center of a motion picture war in which exhibitors refused to show the picture for which he was reported to have received $300,000—these glamorous days are over as the "Wheaton Ice Man" bows to the inexorable laws of nature.

RED 31 YEARS OLD

In those days they never tired Today they tire easily and are causing him to bid good-bye for good and all to his days of football playing.

"I have been lucky so far, only one bad injury in nine years of professional playing and four years at college, and I can tell that my legs cannot stand the strain of playing much longer.

"So I am giving up playing for good and all, and nothing will make me change my mind.

"But I will be back again next year, only in a coaching capacity. I have received four or five good offers, two of them from pro teams and three from colleges, and one of them I will accept.

"Naturally until I decide and let the party mostly concerned know in advance, I don't think it fair to announce the names.

"Football has been kind to me, and I have no regrets.

"I have gone through a fortune, bad investments, closed banks, etc., but this season has been the best for me in seven years.

RED'S GOT ENOUGH

"I have saved every possible cent, tucked it away in the bank and feel confident that I can live comfortably for the rest of my days.

"I have no great desire to be wealthy. My broadcasting in the middle-west,—a football hookup six times a week over a network of 59 stations—has been particularly lucrative.

"Together with a good amount of real estate which some day I may be able to capitalize on and my future earning power, I don't think I will have to worry too much about the wolf.

"Four more games with the Chicago Bears, and I am positively through with football playing.

"But while I am here in Boston I want to say that I think your Cliff Battles and our kid, Beattie Feathers, are the two greatest halfbacks I have ever seen.

"And I should know, for since leaving Illinois to turn professional just before Thanksgiving Day of 1925, I have played in more than 180 games throughout the country, an average of 20 per season, and I have seen the best of them come and go.

TO COACH NEXT YEAR

"As for your coach, Lone Star Dietz, don't let anyone kid you he isn't a great coach. He knows as much football as anyone in the country.

"He has a bunch of kids on his Redskins who will take time to develop. Jim Musick's loss meant the difference between a great team and his present one.

"Give him a smart quarterback, a good fullback and a running guard and Boston will be fighting for the championship next year.

"I hope to locate as a coach where my scalp won't be nailed to the mast in the event my team happens to lose a game now and then."

EAGLE SEXTET DRILLS THRICE EACH WEEK

Practice will be held Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings from 6 to 7 at the Arena. This arrangement, made with George V. Brown of the Garden-Arena, will dispense with the inconvenient early morning practice which was in vogue last winter.

Eight promising sophomores also came out; Jack Burgess, wing; Joe Walsh, defense; Peter Murphy, center; Tom McDermott, wing; Joe McCurdy, goalie; Dan Hannigan and Charlie Morrissey, both wings.

6 YANKS PLACE IN ANZAC TILT

By Associated Press

Melbourne, Australia, Nov. 15—Led by Gene Sarazen, who barely missed equalling the Metropolitan course record with a sizzling 69, six American professionals placed among the leading eight scorers today in the opening round of the 72-hole Melbourne centenary open golf championship.

Harry Cooper and Joe Ezar, both of the United States, tied for second place with 70's.

Joe Kirkwood's 71 tied E. Naismith, Victoria professional, while the Americans, Leo Diegel and Jack Thompson, and V. S. Richardson of New South Wales were in a three-way deadlock at 72.

Sarazen would have tied the record of 68 for the 6,504 yard course but for a missed six-foot putt on the 17th. As it was, however, he clipped five strokes off par 74 and got away to a fine start toward the $5000 first prize. Second place is worth $2000.

E. Smith, listed as an American professional, landed in 37th place with a 77. Jack McLean led a team of four British amateurs with a 75. Leslie Garnett shot a 76, T. A. Bourne 79, and the Hon. Michael Scott an 81.

11 MILLION BET AT 'GANSETT IN FALL MEET

By Associated Press

That New Englanders like their horse racing never was better exemplified than during the recent meeting at Narragansett Park. Topped by the final day when a total of $747,967 was wagered by more than 50,000 persons, the pari-mutuel handle for the 30 days reached the astonishing figure of $11,338,490, or an average of $377,949. At that the meeting failed to equal the August session when the average was $400,000. The final day's figures, however, failed to equal this year's record of $999,140 made on Kentucky Derby Day at Churchill Downs but did exceed the 1933 figures for Derby Day.

There was another example of the turf adage that "they never come back" at Pimlico, Tuesday, when Burning Blaze from the Nash brothers' Sanborn Farm of Chicago was badly outrun in his first start since 1932. The big chestnut was highly thought of prior to the running of the Kentucky Derby two years ago. He went wrong on the eve of the event, however, and did not race again until his appearance in the Monumental purse.

REDSKINS MUST STOP HANSON

The Redskins will have to stop Swede Hanson this Sunday if they are to repeat their early season win over the Philadelphia Eagles and remain in the pennant chase in the Eastern division.

The brilliant Eagles' fullback, who was closely guarded when the Wray-coached eleven showed at Fenway Park, is second to Beattie Feathers of the Bears among the leading ground-gainers and threatens to equal Feathers' feat of smashing Cliff Battles' record set in 1933.

Hanson has gained a total of 714 yards from scrimmage, whereas the Boston ace has accumulated 473 yards this season.

Since joining the Eagles, Ellstrom has been one of the main cogs in the team's attack and his bullet tosses to Carter, now the league's leading pass receiver, have made Lud Wray's eleven a rugged foe for any of its rivals. Last week against Brooklyn they completed six out of 16 passes for substantial gains.

BOWIE SESSION ENDS RACING IN EAST

By Dave Wilson

Bowie Race Track, Md., Nov. 15—The Pimlico track closed yesterday, and today big time racing moves here for its final stand of the 1934 Eastern season.

The Southern Maryland Agricultural Society steps up to offer its annual 12-day session, and the class of the horses, before heading for the warmer climes of the South, will insure a high caliber of racing.

Bowie, situated between Baltimore and Washington, is one of the most popular tracks in the country—partly because it is readily accessible to fans from both cities, and partly because it stages an early Spring and late Fall meet when none of the other Eastern plants is in operation.

None of Bowie's fall stakes has been increased in value, but two new specials will have their inaugural runnings. They are the Bowie Claiming Stakes, $2000 added, one mile and a sixteenth for three-year-olds to be offered as the opening day's feature, and the Marlboro Claiming Stakes, $2000 added, one mile and a half, to be run on the closing day, Nov. 29.

Other Bowie stakes are the Prince George (autumn) Handicap, $2500 added, Nov. 17; Bryan and O'Hara Handicap, $5000 added, Nov. 24; Endurance Handicap, $2500, Nov. 24, and the Thanksgiving Handicap, $2500 added, Nov. 29.

The popular Eton blue and brown silks of C. V. Whitney probably will be carried by High Glee, who needs no introduction to New England race goers, in the Bryan and O'Hara.

Other prominent eligibles for the stake are: Fleam, Barn Swallow, Thursday, Mr. Khayyam, Son Over, Watch Him, Only One, Silent Shot, Dark Hope, Chatmoss, Lady Reigh, Identify Slapdash, Jabot and Mad Frump.

Practically all of the horsesmentioned are eligible for both the Prince George and Thanksgiving handicaps

Prominent endurance eligibles are Marcella Miss, Good Harvest, Billy Bee, Black Helen, Cloud Sweeper, Sound Advice, Polar Flight, Boston Brook, Sylvan Song, Cristate, Gillie, Peradventure, Our Reigh, Firethorn, Commonwealth, Legume, Tangerloo, Marching Home, Dowdy Dell, Good Gamble, Direct Hit, Pretty Night, Wise Prince, Diverting, Pantoufle and Pundit.

At the suggestion of horsemen, Race Secretary Jack Campbell is considering the closing of the daily entry at 10 a. m. instead of 10:30, as has been the custom in the past.

Sammy Renick, who was grounded at the recent Narragansett meeting, has been restored to good standing, and will be in action at Bowie . . . Walter O'Hara, who made possible the beautiful Narragansett track, is on hand for the Bowie opening . . . J. L. Roberts arrived with 14 head from Narragansett . . . Richard Dickman, who made M. Peters' engagements in New England, was an arrival. He reports Peters California bound . . . The train carrying the Brookmeade Stable horses from Narragansett Park to winter quarters at Columbia, S. C., stopped at Pimlico this morning to pick several horses that Specs Crawford had been handling for Bob Smith . . . Elmer Trueman, who raced Star Porter at Rockingham, has taken a contract on Mickey Marks, a 17-year-old New York lad, weighing 85 pounds. Trueman believes him a fine riding prospect . . . Ray Bryson reports that the Fair Grounds meeting in New Orleans will open on Thanksgiving Day.

Mills and Crandall in 8th Cue Match

Johnny Mills of Medford will meet "Shorty Pete" Crandall of Revere in the eighth game for the New England pocket billiard championship tonight at the Bosworth Billiard Hall, 92 Tremont street, at 8 p. m.

With the tourney one-quarter finished, Crandall is tied with Edwin Dawson for first place, each winning two games and losing none. Johnny Mills won his only game played.

2-Day Dog Show in Horticultural Hall

The Cocker Spaniel Breeders' Club of N. E. of 322 Newbury street will hold a two-day dog show in Horticultural Hall, Massachusetts avenue, today and Saturday, from 10 a. m. to 10 p. m. The show will be under the direction of Mrs. E. B. Gilman of Boston.

Over 200 dogs from Canada and the United States as far west as Salt Lake City have been entered and numerous money prizes have been offered.

TECH QUINTET OPENS DEC. 8

Johnny Demo, ace guard, is probably the only veteran certain of a place. It is McCarthy's plan to select his five best men, regardless of past performances, and the showings of the sophomores is weakening the hold of last year's varsity men.

KAYO ARTISTS BOX TONIGHT IN SOUTHIE

There will be a meeting between plenty of knockout artists at the clubrooms of the Irish American A. A., South Boston, tonight.

Walter Gardner of Riverside, R. I., and Eddie Rossi of Everett, New England champion, have entered in the 160-pound class.

The 135-pound class will be another feature, with fast-fisted Jimmy McCarron of Somerville and Phil Salvatore of Chelsea entered.

ITALIAN TEAM IS LEADING RACE

By Associated Press

Chicago, Ill., Nov. 15—The two Italians, Tino Reboli, Newark, N. J., and Avalin Martinetti of Italy, were still clinging to the lead in Chicago's six-day bike race, early today. They went into the lead just before midnight last night.

During the night's jamming, 121 laps were stolen, bringing the total for the week to 570. Despite this, only two spills marred the pedaling.

CHAPTER XXI

I had listened to the boy's story with a great show of sympathetic attentiveness. Now I scowled at him and spoke accusingly, but still not without friendliness.

"Stop spoofing! The money Papadopoulos showed you didn't buy you. You met the girl and were too soft to turn her in. But your vanity—your pride in looking at yourself as a pretty cold proposition—wouldn't let you admit it even to yourself. You had to have a hard-boiled front. So you were meat to Papadopoulos' grinder. He gave you a part you could play to yourself—a super-gentleman-crook, a master-mind, a desperate suave villain, and all that kind of romantic garbage. That's the way you went, my son.

"You went as far as possible beyond what was needed to save the girl from the hoosegow—just to show the world, but chiefly yourself, that you were not acting through sentimentality, but according to your own reckless desires. There you are. Look at yourself."

Whatever he saw in himself—what I had seen or something else—his face slowly reddened, and he wouldn't look at me. He looked past me at the distant road.

I looked into the lighted room beyond him. Tom-Tom Carey had advanced to the center of the floor, where he stood watching us. I jerked a corner of my mouth at him—a warning.

"Well," the boy began again, but he didn't know what to say after that. He shuffled his feet and kept his eyes from my face.

I stood up straight and got rid of the last trace of my hypocritical sympathy.

"Give me your gun, you lousy rat!" I snarled at him.

He jumped back as if I had hit him. Craziness writhed in his face. He jerked his gun chest-high.

DEAD AT MY FEET

Mickey Linehan fired once. Carey was down on the floor, bleeding from the temple.

I stepped over Jack's body, went into the room, knelt beside the swarthy man. He squirmed, tried to say something, died before he could get it out. I waited until my face was straight before I stood up.

"I don't get it all yet," she said slowly, "but if you—"

"Where's Angel Grace?" I interrupted.

"Tied to the kitchen table," she informed me, and went on with her thinking aloud. "You've dealt a hand that—"

"Yeah," I said sourly. "I'm another Papadoupoulos."

Her big eyes suddenly quivered. Pain clouded her handsome brutal face. Two tears came out of her lower eyelids.

* * *

It was after 8 in the morning when I got back to the city. I ate breakfast and then went up to the Agency, where I found the Old Man ging through his morning mail.

"It's all over," I told him. "Papadopoulos knew Nancy Regan was Taylor Newhall's heiress. When he needed a hiding-place after the bank jobs flopped, he got her to take him down to the Newhall country place. He had two holds on her. She pitied him as a misused old duffer, and she was—even if innocently—an accomplice after the fact in the stick-ups.

FULL OF MORPHINE

"Pretty soon Papa Newhall had to go to Mexico on business. Papadopoulos saw a chance to make something. If Newhall was knocked off, the girl would have millions—and the old thief knew he could take them away from her. He sent Barrows down to the border to buy the murder from some Mexican bandits. Barrows put it over, but talked too much. He told a girl in Nogales that he had to go back to 'Frisco to collect plenty from an old Greek,' and then he'd return and buy her the world. The girl passed the news on to Tom-Tom Carey. Carey put a lot of twos together and got at least a dozen for an answer. He followed Barrows up here.

"Angel Grace was with him the morning he called on Barrows here—to find out if his 'old Greek' really was Papadopoulos, and where he could be found. Barrows was too full of morphine to listen to reason . He was so dope-deadened that even after the dark man began to reason with a knife-blade he had to whittle Barrows all up before he began to feel hurt. The carving sickened Angel Grace. She left, after vainly trying to stop Carey. And when she read in the afternoon papers what a finished job he had made of it, she tried to commit suicide, to stop the images from crawling around in her head.

"Carey got all the information Barrows had, but Barrows didnt' know where Papadopoulos was hiding. Papadopoulos learned of Carey's arrival—you know how he learned. He sent Arlie to stop Carey. Carey wouldn't give the barber a chance—until the swarthy man began to suspect Papadopoulos might be at the Newhall place. He drove down there, letting Arlie follow. As soon as Arlie discovered his destination, Arlie closed in, hell-bent on stopping Carey at any cost. That was what Carey wanted. He gunned Arlie, came back to town, got hold of me, and took me down to help wind things up.

"Meanwhile, Angel Grace, in the cooler, had made friends with Big Flora. She knew Flora but Flora didnt' know her. Papadopoulos had arranged a crush-out for Flora. It's always easier for two to escape than one. Flora took the Angel along, took her to Papalopoulos. The Angel went for him, but Flora knocked her for a loop.

"Flora, Angel Grace and Ann Newhall, alias Nancy Regan, are in the county jail," I wound up. "Papadopoulos, Tom-Tom Carey and Jack Counihan are dead."

"They were killed in course of making the arrests?" His mild voice held nothing but its usual unfathomable politeness.

"Yes. Carey killed Papadopoulos. A little later he shot Jack. Mickey—not knowing—not knowing anything except that the dark man was shooting at Jack and me—we were standing apart talking—shot and killed Carey." The words twisted around my tongue, wouldn't come out straight. "Neither Mickey nor Andy know that Jack—nobody but you and I know exactly what the thing—exactly what Jack was doing. Flora Brace and Ann Newhall did know, but if we say he was acting on orders all the time, nobody can deny it."

The Old Man nodded his grandfatherly face and smiled, but for the first time in the years I had known him I knew what he was thinking. He was thinking that if Jack had come through alive we would have had the nasty choice between letting him go free or giving the Agency a black eye by advertising the fact that one of our operatives was a crook. I threw away my cigarette and stood up. The Old Man stood also, and held out a hand to me.

"Thank you," he said.

I took his hand, and I understood him, but I didn't have anything I wanted to confess—even by silence.

"It happened that way," I said deliberately. "I played the cards so we would get the benefit of the breaks—but it just happened that way."

He nodded, smiling benignantly.

"I'm going to take a couple of weeks off," I said from the door.

'Wife in Custody' By Beatrice Lubitz

Miss Mabel, the wit, suddenly dissolved into weak laughter. She manager to gasp between shrieks that Ethel Riley's husband (Ethel was the youngest of the Riley girls) in his uniform had looked like a boy scout.

"Say, what makes you so quiet, Helen? Why don't you say something? You ain't going loyal, I hope." At this rally, the girls roared afresh. Irene Riley, the eldest sister who was in charge of the magnificent Fifty-seventh Street Salon, had once given the girls a talk on loyalty. Later the talk had been printed and hung in the washroom.

Helen Schiller was filing her nails. She laughed good-nauredly. In the roomful of pretty girls—and the Anastasia beauticians were hired not only because of their skill, but with an eye to pulchritude—Helen Schiller was noticeably lovely, but with a quieter, more delicate charm than most of the others.

VOICE LIKE LITANY

Sound died suddenly. Each beautician stood at her post with a pleasant professional smile. The phone started up its incessant buzz and Miss Irma's affected telephone voice floated in to them. "Anastasia's Forty-fourth Street. Good mawning," over and over like a litany.

Miss Vera ushered in the first appointments. The Forty-fourth Street branch catered to the higher-priced business girls, secretaries, buyers, a smattering of theatrical people and middle-class middle-aged matrons. The cream of the trade, of course, was at Fifty-seventh Street.

All the big movie stars who were in town and famous actresses and actors went there. Society people and expensively dressed women and, on occasion, certain frowsy women to whom Irene Riley gurgled "Lady this" or "Lady that." Occasionally a man (usually an actor) came to Forty-fourth Street for a hair wash by the famous Anastasia Method (which included fresh rose petals in the last water—a Riley touch).

The swish of water in the basins, the thick scent of creams, powders, polishes. The whine of the dryers; the hiss and sizzle of steam. The soft hum of conversation and from the desk the singsong voice of Miss Irma: "Anastasia's Forty-fourth Street. Good mawn-ing."

The beauticians were no longer living, breathing girls; they were smiling, efficient robots yes-ing and no-ing breathlessly at the proper intervals—washing, rubbing, manicuring, marcelling, at fever speed because the Riley's had "timed" every job and appointments were made in scientific intervals that allowed for no procrastination of prolonged discussion.

It was work, work. Quickly, efficiently, carefully and smoothly. Fingers flew; soap suds frothed; nails filed into pyramids, ovals, circles. "Long or short, Madam?" "Water too hot?" "Broad waves or narrow ones?" Fresh linen, fresh paper cups for sudsy water. Green Venetian blinds discreetly lowered to prevent a glare in Madam's eyes.

LIKE A QUEEN

At 10:30 a faint stir as Miss Stella Riley, in faultless tailleur, swept in, her wide-set cold-blue eyes taking in every detail of the scene. She nodded briefly to the swathed and becreamed customers, who regarded her as curiously and enviously as did the operators.

She had a magnificent carriage, tall, aggressively erect, with the easy stride and swing of the athlete. She stepped through the reception room, passed the affected Miss Irma, who whinnied into the phone, into her private office with Miss Riley engraved on a silver nameplate beneath a silver carved horse's head, which was used as a knocker.

A wave of silence followed her progress, but as the door of her office closed behind her, it broke like foam follows a wave on a sandy beach.

"My Lord, you'd think she was Queen of England."

"I think she's homely. Big Polak type."

"My cousin knows the family well. My dear, they're worth millions."

"Not they, my dear. Oh, no. That's Walter Riley, the son. He's the sole owner of the shops, I tell you. The sisters work for him."

Said Miss Nettie, rubbing salve into the scalp before her with steely fingertips, "Oh, boy, is he stunning! But he's worse than the girls. Never notices any of us. They treat us like we was dirt. Why, if we meet them in the street they don't notice us. They don't even greet you in the elevator. That's the Riley's for you!"

Everett Fireman Killed in Fall

Falling from a hook and ladder as it raced to a fire, Ladderman Charles E. Carlson of Harding street, Everett, died two hours later in Whidden Memorial hospital from a fractured skull and concussion of the brain. A veteran fireman of 15 years' service, Carlson is survived by his widow and son, 17.

Funeral services will be held Saturday when Everett fire and police departments and representatives from city hall will accord full honors.

GLEASON FINED $70; APPEALS

City Councillor Richard D. Gleason of Roxbury was fined $70 and two companions were fined $55 each in municipal court today as the result of a tussle with a police sergeant at Massachusetts avenue and Shawmut avenue, South End a week ago.

All appealed, Gleason being held in his own recognizance and the others in $200 bail each. Gleason's companions were William D. Glynn of Whittaker street, Roxbury, and James Buckley of Baker street, West Roxbury.

All were charged by Sergeant John D. Holmes of Warren avenue station with attacking him and with drunkenness. An additional charge tearing the sergeant's coat was lodged against Gleason.

The city councillor said he interceded for a motorist because he had known Sergeant Holmes for 20 years. He denied he was drunk and denied the attack. Glynn and Buckley also made general denials, but Judge James H. Devlin found them guilty.

Under questioning by his counsel, Attorney Joseph McDonough, Councillor Gleason said:

15 FLEE QUINCY POINT BLAZE

A fire, which started in a third-floor closet of a three-family house at 24 Moore street, Quincy Point, swept through the roof early today, resulting in $2000 damage.

Noting smoke as he glanced through a bedroom window, Raymond Beale, owner of the building, who occupies the second floor with his wife and four children, aroused his family and other occupants of the building. The Beale children are Raymond, Jr., 5; Donald, 4; Joan, 3, and Alice, 1.

Mrs. Beale, overcome by smoke, suffered somewhat from shock, but tenants and their families escaped unharmed.

They are Mrs. Annie Rosenburg and her son Gus, who reside on the third floor, where the fire started, and Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Rowle, who, with the former's brother, Otis, and their four children, occupy the first-floor apartment.

Two-year-old Robert Rowle was carried by his mother to a neighbor's home. The other children are Edith, 11; Norma, 8, and Walter, 6.

Hero Rescues 5 in Death Pit

By Associated Press

Providence, Nov. 15—Three of five men overcome by petroleum vapor while repairing a pipe in the condenser room of the Texas Company's refinery were in a critical condition today after physicians had worked for more than three hours in frantic efforts to revive them.

They were heroically rescued by Emmett L. Lott, assistant superintendent at the plant, who, risking his life, braved the fumes and, single handed, carried them out one by one from the eight-foot pit into which they had fallen.

The Boston Evening American "About Faces" editor is proud to present today's famous Hollywood stars. They will all appear at the Loew's State Theater in the Samuel Goldwyn presentation, "We Live Again." This adaptation of Tolstoy's immortal "Resurrection" has been directed by Rouben Mamoulian. It is a United Artists release.

The four cinema stars, as they appear in today's "About Faces" series by Art. Moger, may not be easy to identify at first. But after you visit the Loew's State Theater, we are sure that you will have no difficulty in naming them and sharing in the $25 in weekly cash awards. After you have correctly identified today's "We Live Again" stars, fill in the squares beneath their names.

These squares equal the number of letters in their names. Use the letter clue as a guide and mail your entire week's solutions to: The About Face Editor, Boston Evening American, Boston, Mass. The Boston Evening American offesr $25 in weekly cash prizes to those who know their favorite stars as they appear at their favorite theaters.

Prizes of: $5.00 first prize; second prize, $3.00; third prize, $2.00; and 15 prizes of a brand new one dollar bill, each, are given weekly.

Bootleggers Deal In Stolen Coal

New York, Nov. 15—Stiff competition from stolen anthracite coal is being felt in Eastern retail markets by legitimate dealers as the first snow of winter covers the ground.

Traffic in stolen anthracite, described as "bootlegging" by the Anthracite Institute of New York, has reached an annual rate of 3,000,000 tons, a report of the institute estimates. Consuming areas, roughly 100 miles from the producing areas, cover parts of New York, New Jersey, Maryland, District of Columbia, Long Island and Vermont.

PORTER WOMAN DECLARED SANE

Five examinations of Miss Alice G. Porter, Medford school teacher, convinced him that she was sane, Dr. C. Stanley Raymond of the state department of mental diseases testified at the contest over her will in Middlesex court today.

Miss Porter, whose death last February was followed by a charge of murder against Samuel J. Catino, handyman at her home, and his subsequent acquittal, left her entire estate to Catino. The will is contested by an aunt, Miss Sarah Porter of Ludlow, N. H.

Dr. Raymond's opinion differed from that testified to by Dr. A. Warren Stearns yesterday. The only other witness today, Miss Helen Henshaw, of Salem, testified that she was with Miss Porter when the will was made in 1932 and that Miss Porter appeared sane.

We're Making Progress

But Cheer Leading Isn't Enough

THE new efforts of the Roosevelt administration to work in closer co-operation with legitimate business and finance are exceedingly encouraging.

But the ultimate success of the new rapprochement will depend more on the tangible steps taken than on mere verbal assurances.

Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which has become the world's largest money lending institution, recently said:

Mr. Hoover tested out the possibilities of restoring prosperity through giving the Federal Government the role of cheer leader.

Specifically, instead of keeping business terrified concerning its future tax bill, President Roosevelt could clarify the air by delineating sympathetically the capacity of the taxpayer to share with the government.

A STATEMENT from the White House, for example, to the effect that federal economic policies will be shaped so that the government henceforth can be financed not out of higher tax rates, but out of the proceeds of an expanding federal revenue resulting from a moderate tax on a rising national income.

It is likely that an announcement of an actual reduction in tax rates would increase revenue receipts because of its effect in encouraging enterprises to carry on.

By fostering business and enabling it to absorb men now on public payrolls, the President could create a beneficent cycle of recovery, which would become cumulative in its good results.

As intelligent business men sense a desire to proceed in this direction, they will throw their full strength into the battle for recovery.

Business, with economic fundamentals already improved, is raring to go, as soon as it is sufficiently encouraged by evidence that the administration is proceeding along sound lines.

Facts About Mooney Appeal

Constitutional Law Issue

After eighteen years Tom Mooney, California's most celebrated prisoner, gets a hearing in the United States Supreme Court on a novel point of constitutional law

Previously the Court had refused to intervene on the ground that it lacked jurisdiction. Under statute law the case was one for California alone to decide.

In the plea now pending before the Supreme Court Mooney's lawyers assert that he was convicted on perjured evidence and has been refused corrective justice because of legal technicalities.

Thus Mooney, it is alleged, has been deprived of liberty "without due process of law," in violation of the guarantees of the Federal Constitution.

On this point the Supreme Court has assumed jurisdiction to the extent of requiring California to "show cause" why Mooney should not have a habeas corpus hearing.

Such a hearing may or may not be held—and, if held, it may or may not set Tom Mooney free.

Treat Women Right

Station Cells for Males

The Boston Police Department has finally taken a step it ought to have taken at least 40 years ago.

As the result of a new order, women prisoners will no longer be held in cells at our police stations.

Facilities at divisional police stations are not suitable for the detention of women. And it should be remembered that many of the women arrested are either innocent or are guilty of only petty offences.

And, until convicted, ALL should be treated as innocent. This applies to men as well as women. Time enough for punishment AFTER conviction.

Boston a Clean Spot

Stock Dealings Above Board

In comparison with other financial centers, Boston has had few stock-swindlers, bucket-shops and other parasites of the gullible investor.

The State Department of Public Utilities, invoking the Blue-Sky law, has done better than a fair job.

City of Conventions

Boston Ready to Accommodate

Hotel men are planning a campaign to bring more conventions to Boston. The Chamber of Commerce will aid.

No high-pressure methods should be required to sell Boston as a convention city, although an enthusiastic stranger might do a better job than some of us who live and work here, accustomed to the many attractions and callous of them.

Our hotels are the best. Our convention halls are many and of varying size. No other metropolis affords such proximity to the beauties of ocean, woodland and mountain in combination with historical background.

Boston is a grand place to live or work in or visit.

Human Side of the News -:- Booth Farewell and the "Sallies" -:-

By Edwin C. Hill
The Globe Trotter of Hearst Metrotone News

Madison Square Garden is filled to its 20,000 capacity. Withal there is a quietness and a calm not in keeping with a crowded Garden. This night is different. No pair of gladiators stand in a squared circle to pummel each other for the enjoyment of a Roman gallery and a purse of $50,000.

Instead the Episcopal Bishop of New York delivers an address, a message is read from the President of the United States and then his attorney-general speaks for the nation.

A woman, strong and vigorous at 68, rises to respond to their tributes. She still retains an eloquence for which she is famous as she speaks on to this conclusion:

HALL IN SLUMS

A wistful memory must have come to her on that platform, a movie cutback, as it were, of another platform 30-odd years ago, when she made her first appearance in America. And the scene was not the old Madison Square Garden which Stanford White designed.

No; it was a hall in the slums, packed with a jeering antagonistic mob, and to get into it, the young Englishwoman had to climb up a fire escape.

They threw eggs, and she smiled. How could they frighten with eggs one who had been pelted many times with stones by the roughs of London's Limehouse? Such experiences had sharpened her wits, and foreigner though she was, she grasped the one method of stopping the hoodlums, and that was by seizing the American flag in one hand and the Salvationists' banner in the other and defying them to continue their throwing and their abuse.

This Christmas Day the Army, while it is succoring hundreds of thousands of the poor of 80 countries, will also be celebrating the 69th birthday of its general. Evangeline was the fourth daughter and the sixth child born to William and Catherine Booth, and in the London of Dickens, she came into the world on December 25, 1865.

When Evangeline was 12, William Booth hit upon the name, the Salvation Army, and the child became one of the band, with a red ribbon in her blue bonnet and a tambourine in her hand to catch the few farthings of the almsgivers.

MARKED TO LEAD

She was marked for leadership and oratory. She was as staunch and as preserving in the face of persecution as William Booth himself. The father recognized this, and the daughter was to be his chief lieutenant in the years when his long beard was turning snow-white and abuse was turning to honors, such as a degree from Oxford and receptions by the Emperor of Japan and by Theodore Roosevelt in the White House.

Eva became an American citizen and will retain that citizenship. Under the title of commander she built up her force here to achieve great and lasting appreciation for its service among the American troops in France. For that service she marched alongside of Foch and Pershing in the Parade of Triumph in Paris.

Today the fires of the crusader and missionary still burn within this woman of charm and eloquence. But she has a practical side which never for a moment loses sight of the fact that this old world isn't going to change overnight or by miracles.

There is and always will be some who need and may heed the message of faith, who may respond to the watchword:

"A man may be down, but he is never out."

LABOR ROW ENDS

A labor row which would have made Page 1 seems to have folded up. Professional models, bona-fide "working girls" from humble homes have reconsidered their threat, apparently, to "steal" the boy friends of society girls who have been going in to the modeling game, not for need of money, but to assuage boredom.

Five or six years ago there were nearly four thousand girls getting their living in New York City, posing for ads. The number lessened in the depression years, but the demand is still good. Most of them are New York girls, many of them home bodies, serious minded, hard-working young women who live at chaperoned clubs.

Distinguished artists sponsor their guild and in the past have helped them to fend off racketeers who offered to "organize" their business. The girl models pose for artists as well as commercial photographers.

The Junior League did not deliberately start out to compete with the professionals. In fact, it appears that the League has been nice about the whole business. Washington hasn't had to intervene. But it is true that many girls who are used to living like duchesses are cashing in on their ability to wear clothes.

So more and more of the debs are slinking and slithering through sales rooms, or by the aid of the photographer, glorifying everything from doughnuts to 16-cylinder cars. Amateur or pro, the model game is interesting. Every once in a while the word goes out that the trend is back to plumpness, but the supposed trend seems to end right there.

Among his happy selections were Justine Johnson, Dorothy Knapp, Olive Thomas, Naomi Johnson, Beryl Halley and Madeline Worthing. Incidentally Greta Garbo, who was once a factory girl and barber's assistant, got her real start as a hat model.

Marry-Go-Round -:- -:- By Helen Rowland

"WOMEN IN HIS LIFE"

A man thinks that his love-life doesn't matter much—that it is only an incident or an accident.

Helen Rowland

That he can play ducks and drakes with it and mess it up anyway he pleases, so that he doesn't let love interfere with his business, his profession or his political career.

He reasons that he can take marriage or leave it alone; and that, in the meantime, the women in his life are just part of the ensemble—a little less important than his barber, his tailor or his golf clubs.

Oh, yes? Well, History tells a different story.

LOCK OUT OF WEDLOCK

Take King Henry VIII, one of the wisest and most brilliant monarchs who ever ruled England. In 1534 he granted a charter to the University of Cambridge "to print all manner of books," which was practically the beginning of English literature.

He modernized many ancient institutions and made many wise new laws. He even took the lock out of wedlock and invented divorce.

But are these the things for which he is remembered? Oh no! It is the WOMEN in his life, who have immortalized him — and made him the favorite subject for playwrights and authors of historical novels.

It is Anne Boleyn with whose initials his own are intertwined in the arch at Hampton Court—even though it was off with the old love's head and on with the new, before the beautiful double-monogram was finished—who did most to keep Henry's memory alive.

His Proverbs, after all these thousands of years, still outshine any work of philosophy ever written. And his Song of Songs is still the most beautiful poem in any language.

Yet, it is the thousand women in his harem plus the Queen of Sheba, that most people think of when his name is mentioned. His love-life!

MAN OF IDEAS

Sir Walter Raleigh was a brave adventurer and a man of brilliant and original ideas. If he had never done anything except discover the use of smoking tobacco, most men and many women should be grateful to him.

But it was his little act of gallantry, in laying down his cloak for the queen to walk on, which made him famous as the world's most gallant gentleman. That's all most people remember about him—a beautiful gesture and a woman!

Marc Antony was a statesman, a leader, a conqueror and probably the most brilliant politician of his day. Especially a POLITICIAN! But it was his little love-affair with Cleopatra which has kept his memory green.

No story of Napoleon Bonaparte is complete without plenty of Josephine in it. And any play about Robert Browning is mostly about his Elizabeth.

A man thinks that the woman (or the women) in his life don't count. But they can darken or brighten his name all the way down through History.

NOW

Whene'er I read of ancient times and battles lost and won
I wonder if their pulses thrilled who talked with Wellington,
And were they happy in their day, who trod those English streets

At night, when in a dreamy mood, the thought occurs to me
That Time will bring great things to earth which I shall never see.
And looking forward I am sure long after I am gone
There will be great achievements I should like to look upon;
But when my birthday rolls around such notions fade away
And I rejoice that I was born to know the world today.

Had I known Shelley I'd have missed the friends who line my way;
Missed all the joyous comradeship which brightens every day;
And had I not as yet been born, though marvels I might see,
Still I should not have known the joy these years have brought to me.
So when my birthday rolls around, with gratitude I bow,
And thank the Lord, whose choice it was, that I am living Now.

The League of Nations

A Transparent Falseface for Dog-Eat-Dog Diplomacy

By H. L. Mencken

IN THEORY, the League of Nations is a great international organization for keeping the peace of the world.

In reality, it is simply a branch of the Foreign Office of whatever nation, or group of nations, manages to grab control of it.

So long as the interests of its masters are not at stake, it plays neutral with great unction, and on occasion it has even gone to the length of stopping some remote and one-horse war.

But when the big shots fall out it has to take sides, and the side it takes is always determined by the pull of the contestants, not by the merits of the row.

The common belief in this country, diligently spread by those who try to hustle the United States into it, is that the League was organized by Woodrow Wilson, or, at all events, that he proposed organizing it. But that is only moonshine. The idea for it was actually HATCHED IN THE BRITISH FOREIGN OFFICE, and its original purpose was nothing more altruistic than to safeguard the British war loot, and to protect England against the post-war schemes and machinations of France.

THE English, as everyone knows, went into the war with only half a heart.

In those days, as in these, they disliked and distrusted the French. But they disliked and distrusted the Germans even more, and in addition were envious of them and afraid of them, so they not only took the French side, but also engaged to bring in a number of other nations, INCLUDING THE UNITED STATES.

Holland, Switzerland, Spain and the Scandinavian countries were too smart to succumb, but the United States was easier, for the English could tackle us in our own language, and tackle us they surely did.

When we fell at last it was at a critical moment, for Germany was winning. Our help turned the tide and saved England, whose back was to the wall. Moreover, we did the job free of charge, and even paid most of the bills.

IN FACT, we are still paying them, and there would never have been any depression if they had not come in.

Unluckily, our aid not only disposed of Germany but also turned France loose upon Europe, greatly to England's alarm.

The English had not foreseen that the French would emerge from the war so full of malicious animal magnetism, and so eager to run the whole Continent, not to mention large parts of Asia and Africa.

Something had to be done to keep them within bounds, and that something TOOK THE FORM OF THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS.

The idea behind it was to line up the "enlightened opinion of the world" against the French appetite for power and glory. This enlightened opinion, of course, was to be supplied by England, with the United States standing by as stooge, bouncer and paymaster.

But as Wilson passed out of the picture the United States began to see a red light, and in the end refused flatly to join.

THE English were thus left in a precarious position, for the French were rapidly acquiring clients and allies, and were presently in control of the League. So recourse was had to the late enemy, Germany, and in 1926, after some heavy pulling and hauling, it was brought in.

But this plan to bolster up England also turned out to be a bad one, for the Germans, wracked by internal troubles, could put little effective pressure on France, and in a little while the League was again A BRANCH OF THE FRENCH FOREIGN OFFICE.

Last October the Germans cleared out, convinced that there was nothing save grief for them within, and soon afterward the French perfected their control by bringing in a new ally, Russia.

Such is the situation today. The English have lost the struggle and the French have the League where they want it. As always, it leaps diligently to the service of its master.

Its commission in the Saar, supposedly neutral, fills the world's newspapers with inflammatory stuff designed to prepare the way for a French invasion next January, and if any more such dirty work is needed elsewhere it will be done promptly and with loud hallelujahs.

The realistic Japs quit in disgust even before the Germans. Foreseeing that France would bring Russia in, and that a French-Russian alliance would be bad for their own plans, they departed as quickly as possible and ARE NOW MAKING READY FOR THE INEVITABLE NEXT WAR.

THIS is the sorry bunch that the United States is besought to join.

Once more England has been outmaneuvered by France and is hanging out on a limb. And once more all the Anglomaniacs begin rushing hither and yon, howling that we'll be traitors to humanity if we don't go to her aid.

The same buncombe fooled the American people in 1917. But it is not likely to fool them again.

You Can't Leave Love to Luck

YOU CAN'T
LEAVE LOVE TO LUCK.
* * *
Love first may come
With leaping ecstasy,
But when this passes—
As it always may—
Love, too, will go
Unless you make it stay.
* * *
For there come times
When hearts
Are deaf and dumb—
Nothing yearns or burns—
These times MUST come:
They are not accidents,
Nor do they prove
Your choice of love
Was wrong.
* * *

Elsie Robinson

They come
With every lover,
Every loving bond—
Mother or Father,
Sister, Brother, Mate,
Always, at times,
Love seems
As cold as hate—
Cut off, forever,
By malignant fate.
* * *
But it's not so—
Such chilling
Of the heart's
As much a part
Of life
As thirst or hunger—
It's the natural ebb
Of our affection's flow.
Such times must come
For all who love,
And when they come
You must know why,
And how
To meet them,
Or your love will die.
* * *
YOU CAN'T
LEAVE LOVE TO LUCK.
You must, at times,
Build love,
Though lacking
All delight;
As blind men
Weave a pattern
In the night,
Counting
Spacing
Word and smile—
Groping
Through darkness
Of both heart and head
As blind men fumble
With their unseen thread.
* * *
Until at last
From out the dull
Gray warp and woof
Of service
There's the shine
Of that sweet wonder
Which you thought
Had passed—
And, once again,
You feel
Love's beautiful design.
